Phillip Feagan Appointed Attorney For Social Service

In the 2 November 1981 County Commissioners' meeting, Tax Supervisor Buster Wilson brought some very good news. The railroads in North Carolina felt they were paying proportionately higher taxes than other commercial and private sectors. They thus refused to pay for the last 8 years. The counties banded together, hired lawyers, and the first phase is over, on the counties' side. Polk County, with respect to commercial and industrial properties, will receive 95.82% of the assessed taxes at a cost of $1000. The settlement on personal property is in the works now.

The Board will ask one final time for the names of those who use the services of the Soil and Water Conservation District office by next meeting.

Paul Culberson updated the Board on the latest activities of Western North Carolina tomorrow. A projection indicates that the school population in Polk County will decrease and the over-65 population will increase by 2000 AD.

In other business, the Board appointed Faye McIntyre to the Adult Education Committee, and, upon the request of the Social Services Department, appointed Phillip Feagan as their attorney for a 1-year renewable contract, expiring 1 July. — League of Women Voters Observer
