May 1991 Opening For Tryon Estates

Moving vans should start pulling up to Tryon Estates by May 1991.

That's the new move-in date for the retirement village under construction in Columbus, officers of ACTS, the parents company, announced last week at an update meeting for future residents.

Construction on the first phase of the complex should begin Friday, said Bob Bowman, project manager.

The first phase will include 142 apartments, of which 120 are already leased. Also included is a 42,000 square foot dining, recreation and activity building, and a 104-bed medical facility.

When Phase II is completed, Tryon Estates will have over 500,000 square feet under roof, Bowman said. There will be 284 apartments.

In another major announcement made during the update meeting, ACTS officials disclosed that their construction financing is in place with First Union National Bank. The project will cost over $40 million, he said.

Arranging the financing was slower than expected, Bowman said, due to the tightness of credit in the wake of the savings and loan crisis. That and some bad weather has caused construction delays. A move-in date of December 1990 was originally forecast.

Bowman said Tryon Estates,
