"Paw Prints"

Interested readers of the Tryon Bulletin will soon see a new weekly feature, "Paw Prints." The pets shown in Thursday's edition will be available for adoption from the Foothills Humane Society. The animals are being kept at the Daisy Hill Kennels on Campobello. They will be transferred to the new animal shelter on Little Mountain Road this fall.

Our gratitude goes to Dr. Marion Baker who has generously donated a new Polaroid camera to the shelter, and volunteered to be responsible for the weekly article's picture and adoption information. We hope this important volunteer project will increase the number of adoptions for these homeless animals.

The Shelter is overloaded with abandoned animals who need homes right now. Please visit us.

Turner Awarded $3,000 by NCNB

Christina Lynne Turner has received the $3,000 Leadership Award through NCNB's Scholarship program for children of employees.

Christina, who is a sophomore at the University of South Carolina at Spartanburg, is the daughter of Darlene Turner, who works in NCNB National Bank's Tryon office.

Christina graduated from Landrum High School in 1989. She won the Josten's Outstanding Senior Award in 1989, first place in district and state FBLA Accounting Competition in 1989, the Freshman Achievement in Writing Award in 1990, the Dean's List 1990 at USCS, and was inducted into Gamma Beta Phi Honor Society in 1990. She is studying business and accounting at USCS.

Census Count May Be Challenged

The preliminary numbers gathered in the 1990 Census are in and Polk County officials think their county may have been undercounted.

Interim County Manager Glenn Rhodes on Tuesday night told the board that the 1990 Census preliminary report shows 14,383 residents in Polk County, up from just over 12,000 in 1980.

"Personally, I feel it's low," Rhodes said.

Board chairman Jeannie Martin said that the count is very important to the county in that many of the county's revenues are allocated on a per capita basis. She said she believes the county population today is nearer to 15,000.

"It's extremely important," Rhodes said. He told the board that the county has 15 days to review the count and, if necessary, contest it. Rhodes said he plans next week to look at specific zones within the county and determine where any errors might have occurred.

Rhodes, a Polk County resident, said he never received a Census form, and Martin said she had not received one either.

In other business Tuesday:

* The board voted to send a letter to Gov. Jim Martin asking that he not sign into
