The weather Thursday: high 93, low 65, hum. 78 percent.

Inside today's Bulletin, we are reprinting a story by N.C. writer Doris Betts, as are newspapers across the state, to mark the occasion of Newspaper Literacy Day in North Carolina.

If someone you know needs help with reading skills, or if you would like to help in the Each-One-Teach-One program, you can call John Clark, president of the Polk County Literacy Council, at 894-8120, or the state Care-Line at 1-800-662-7030 (TDD/Voice).

Steve Strickland had an idea for a common language which might be used by "taxpayers" and "pro-education" folks to move together from arguing to finding solutions. He suggests that the debate center around results. Are students learning? Are accepted, verifiable measures showing improvement?

Strickland suggests that everyone wants quality education for Polk County children, and that if the debate focused on results, the rest of the issues would come into a proper
