Stearns' Renovation Report Turned In

The Stearns Educational Center in Columbus is the oldest school and one of the oldest buildings in Polk County, yet its renovation has been a controversial subject since it was closed and converted to an office building after the 1987-88 school year.

The cost of the renovation of the Stearns Education Center is the first item on a list of information requested by the Polk County Board of Commissioners in a July 16, 1990 resolution.

The $55,000 budgeted from the 1988-89 fund balance and the final $54,759.36 price tag on the building's renovation is listed in detail in the requested financial report which has been in the county manager's office for over two weeks.

The renovation charges include lumber, sheet metal, paint, electrical supplies, vertical blinds, carpeting and a small amount to a local hauling company to move from the county office annex to Stearns.

The protests over the renovation costs from both taxpayers and public office holders have been that the money was used for administration housing and not directly for student learning.

The amount of money spent on the Stearns renovation is not the issue, said Polk County Commissioner Ken Faulkner: "For the amount of money spent,
