Our weather reporter was unavailable Wednesday, but we'll bring you the whole Tuesday story — highs and lows — tomorrow.

Wanda Cash, the Bulletin bookkeeper, receptionist, office manager, and publisher's assistant, had her baby Halloween Day, a son. The announcement is on the front page today.

If we stumble a bit for the next few months while Wanda is out, please bear with us. Over a decade's experience is missing up front and we just have to hunt a little bit harder to get the same answers.

Bobbie Briggs of Landrum is filling in for Wanda, helping Angie Scoggins keep the shop running smoothly, the phones answered, the bills paid and all the rest. We'll introduce Bobbie in a story tomorrow.

Polk County Democrats will share a free chicken supper at Harmon Field Saturday night at 6 p.m.

Don't forget to vote next Tuesday. There are so many issues of importance to this county, the state and the nation. Put on your thinking cap, ask

County Commissioners Candidates Profiled

Each candidate for the Polk County Board of Commissioners has been asked a set of questions by the Tryon Daily Bulletin. What follows is a synopsis of the answers given by two of the candidates. Voters on Nov. 6 will have three votes, and six candidates to choose from, three Republicans and three Democrats. The final commissioners' profiles will be published Friday.

SUE COCHRAN

Democrat Sue Cochran is running for the Polk County Board of Commissioners for the first time, but she helped shape the board as it is today.

Cochran first brought up the idea of a five-person county commission, she said, because she thought three commissioners did not have a wide enough range of views. She was also the first woman chairman of the Polk County Democratic Party.

One of Polk County's strengths is that the commissioners have a chance to direct the growth of the county and an opportunity to help some of the departments grow, Cochran said. But one of the county's governmental problems is that county employees such as the county manager come and go too quickly.

"About the time they know the county and what they can do to help, they're moving on," she pointed out.

Polk County can't compete with bigger counties which can pay more, Cochran said. However, she said that probably an older county manager would be more likely to stay, she said.

People working together and minimal problems could also

TIM McCORMACK

Green Creek Polk County Polk Board of Commissioners candidate Tim McCormack calls himself a "very conservative" Republican.

Though at 31 years old he is quite busy with three children, a job and a business, he feels that it is important to have a balance in the county government of not only those leaders who have the wisdom and knowledge of age, but also those with youthful direction and ideas.

"One of the things I can bring to the county board of commissioners is a new direction of thinking and long-term thinking in the county," he said.

One of Polk County's governmental strengths is a tremendous cross section of people, McCormack pointed out. But too many people are going in different directions right now and this has produced weaknesses, McCormack said.

"The Board of Elections is in one direction and the Board of Commissioners is in another. They all need to be a unified group to get anywhere," he said.

To overcome this weakness, McCormack would like to see the new school board and the commissioners come together and work towards a common
