The North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service 1991 Gardener's Calendar is now on sale. The extension service already has won an award for the calendar, which features a beautiful color photograph of Pearson's Falls on the front.

On the page with each month's dates are a series of Garden Notes, telling you what to fertilize, what to plant, what to prune, pests to watch out for, how to care for your lawn and chores to remember.

In the back is a Polk County Profile, including population, altitudes of the towns and most prominent mountain peaks, and climate data.

This calendar deserves awards, and the gratitude of gardeners across the county.

Because there will be no postal service Monday, there will be no Bulletin published and the Bulletin office will be closed. The staff, however, will work part of the day Monday to be sure that weekend news is included in Tuesday's Bulletin.
