The weather Wednesday: high 66, low 35, hum. 77 percent.

Polk County commissioner John Edwards, a veteran, spoke at the Veteran's Day ceremonies last Sunday in Columbus. He said the number of people turning out to honor America's veterans was very disappointing, and that he expected more patriotism from Polk Countians.

The number of people making donations to the Habitat Auction, which will be held Saturday, is not disappointing. An interesting variety of items, from art to automobiles, will be auctioned at the Habitat Resale Store in Landrum from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

The first annual Crafts for HOPE sale will also be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Stearns Gym in Columbus. All proceeds will go to benefit Steps to HOPE.

There will be a musical program held Saturday at 7 p.m. at Tryon Elementary to raise money to help pay the hospital expenses of Harry E. Fox.

A nationally acclaimed, one-woman portrayal of Pulitzer Prize winning author, and turn-of-the-century pioneer Willa

Topless Dancing Ceases For Now

Tryon Police Chief Nathan Shields delivered a copy of Tryon's newly adopted "adult businesses" ordinance to Papa's Bar & Grill on Hwy. 176 Thursday afternoon.

The ordinance, which restricts the location of "adult" businesses, was to take effect at 5 p.m. Thursday. Under those restrictions, topless dancing would no longer be permitted at Papa's present location.

Bar owner, Frances J. Pritchard of Lynn, said she would comply with the ordinance for the time being.

"There won't be any dancing here tonight," she said. "I'd rather not say anything right now until I talk to my attorney, which I will do so tomorrow."

Tryon Town Manager Matthew Dolge said he had double checked with legal counsel from the N.C. League of Municipalities and that, according to the League, the wording of Tryon's ordinance is legally sound.

The ordinance, passed by the Tryon Town Council Monday night, restricts the location of "adult businesses" according to their secondary effects on surrounding neighborhoods. Under the ordinance, such businesses cannot locate within certain distances of schools, residential neighborhoods or other adult businesses. Following those guidelines, an adult business would only be permitted in Tryon on South Trade Street.
