The weather Monday: high 51, low 28, hum. 68 percent.

Carol Cloud, daughter of Russell and Inky Cloud, may be on television tonight. She played the part of a bank teller in the episode of "Unsolved Mysteries" scheduled to be aired tonight.

However, the show may be preempted due to the extended news broadcasts from the Persian Gulf. And her part was so small, Inky said, that the footage of Carol may have ended up on the editing room floor.

Urban and Clair Foerster of Tryon have returned from Connecticut and stopped by the Bulletin office recently to talk shop. Their son, Trey, has recently purchased another newspaper in Wisconsin, The Tomorrow River Times in Amherst. Trey and his wife, Mary, own Trey Foerster Ink, Inc., a firm which published the Iola Herald, the Manawa Advocate, and various Community Resource Guides. He also co-publishes Wisconsin Country Music Scene.

The Tomorrow River Times is the same size as the Tryon Daily Bulletin, and is published bi-

911 Start-Up To Be Feb. 14

The new Emergency-911 telephone service for Polk County should be operational by Feb. 14, the Board of Commissioners learned on Monday.

Some emergency calls have already been received by dispatchers working the 911 lines, but county residents were urged not to call 911 before the service officially begins. The lines are tied up this week by callers verifying the information they supplied about themselves to be sure it has been entered into the 911 computer correctly.

Bill Rhodes told the board that workers in the new 911 communications room below the Sheriff's office Monday had received 200 calls from telephone customers calling to verify their information, and he expected a lot more that evening. Rhodes is an officer with Interact, the Asheville computer company which sold Polk its equipment.

Rhodes said 6,000 information sheets were mailed to Polk County residences and businesses. He said about 70 percent of those have been returned, and urged any area residents who have not returned their form to do so immediately. Workers eventually will have to call those whose forms have not been returned.

Call-ins to verify emergency information are being accepted from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Columbus customers with the telephone

Friend Of Hospice

A lady of refinement, talented in music and poetry, always eager to assist someone with special needs, Sarah Darnall and her late husband through the years helped to finance the education of countless young persons.

Widowed in middle life, Mrs. Darnall continued with generous deeds of all kinds with lasting effect upon many lives.

When a Hospice program emerged in the Polk community, its concept of care for persons terminally ill caught and held the interest of Mrs. Darnall, culminating in a substantial bequest to Hospice of Polk County. Her donations formerly given annually can continue through earnings accruing from funds she bequeathed to Hospice.

Sarah Darnall, "Aunt Sarah" to many in her town of Tryon, lived to age 102, passing on in October 1989, a full life not to be soon forgotten. Her support of Hospice, both past and future, will carry an extended and much appreciated benefit to the community.

A salute to a valiant and generous lady. — Reporter.
