The screenplay for the top-grossing movie for the last two weeks, "The Silence of the Lambs," was written by the brother of a Tryon resident.

Ted Tally, the screenwriter, is the brother of Mrs. Alan (Susan) Leonard.

Tally based the screenplay upon the novel by Thomas Harris. The movie, which grossed $11.9 million in its second weekend showing, stars Jodie Foster as an FBI agent who must befriend an imprisoned mass murderer in order to solve another case.

Tally also wrote the screenplay for "White Palace," a movie released last year starring Susan Sarandon. In that story, Sarandon plays an older waitress who becomes involved with a younger, upper class man.

From Hollywood to Congress: John B. Allen of Tryon asked that we bring to your attention the efforts of the Council for Citizens Against Government Waste.

Accident Injures Two In Pea Ridge

Tanya Nelon was discharged from St. Luke's Hospital Tuesday morning, four days after being seriously injured in an accident.

According to N.C. Highway Patrol officer Pat Staggs, Nelon was injured Friday afternoon at the intersection of Fowler Road and Hwy. 108, just east of Pea Ridge Baptist Church.

Nelon, driving a 1988 Nissan, attempted to turn left onto Fowler and turned right into the path of Terry Mills, who was driving a 1988 Chevrolet truck headed in the opposite direction.

Nelon, who was not wearing a seatbelt, was seriously injured, Staggs said. Mills, who was wearing a seat belt, was treated and released.

Nelon was charged with unsafe movement and a seatbelt violation, Staggs said.
