Graves and his committee are planning to present a broad range of musical styles. So set your lawn blankets by the door with a cooler, all ready to go. We'll let you know the details as they become available.

We understand Opal Edwards hit a deer with her car while driving along Houston Road Wednesday night. She apparently missed one deer and just as she was sighing with relief another jumped right into her path.

Be careful out there.

Alan Leonard suggested a final word would be in order regarding the failure of the Russian coup, since we first ventured into the arena of world news commentary Wednesday.

Once you finishing jumping with joy at the turn of events in Russia, what strikes me is all this talk about Boris Yeltsin. He was courageous, yes. But he would be no one without Gor-

Habitat Auction Moves Location To Tryon Site

As preparations for the third annual Thermal Belt Habitat for Humanity auction continue, good news was reported by Bud Carson, chairman of the 1991 event. This year's auction is scheduled for October 19.

The good news is the location of this year's sale. The Robert Capozzi Family, owner of Side Street Pizza and recent purchasers of the building formerly occupied by Years Ago Antiques, has generously donated use of the building for the October auction.

The Capozzis plan to open a first-class Italian restaurant on the site next year.

Carson expressed delight with the opportunity to use the Capozzi building, saying: "Not only will we have more space for the auction and adequate parking, but the central location in Tryon is super and will virtually guarantee the best Habitat auction yet."

Rick Amendola will again donate his professional services as auctioneer.

In other preparations for the auction a general canvas committee of 30 or more volunteers has been enlisted to call on local businesses, factories and professional offices for contributions to this annual project. Also, Chuck Doster, Habitat Resale Store manager, has already set aside valuable items; such as, antiques, furniture, appliances and other household
