The weather Tuesday: high 57, low 39, hum. 69 percent.

President Bush in his State of the Union address on Tuesday night said he just "can't accept no for an answer" when it comes to cutting the capital gains tax.

Some members of Congress immediately began rallying themselves to see if they can force him to accept a 'no.'

It will be an interesting fight. A reader awhile back brought us a clipping from the Wall Street Journal that I imagine pretty well sums up President Bush's thinking on capital gains.

The dean of students at Genessee College in Batavia, N.Y. wrote a column describing how he and his wife attempted to demonstrate for their kids the American enterprise system.

As an investment, they bought a beaten down house in an old neighborhood and as a family set about fixing it up. They hired a plumber and electrician, bought supplies at the lumber store, home improvement center, fabric store, building store, drug store and pizza shop. They were on a first name basis with

Girl, 16, Assaulted

A 16-year-old girl was beaten Saturday night behind Bryan's Store on Markham Road, Tryon Mayor Bob Neely reported to the town council Monday.

The council was discussing crime in the town. "We're going to have to get more coverage on Friday and Saturday night," Neely said.

Mobile Home Zone To Be Considered

A public hearing will be held Feb. 17 to discuss the establishment of a mobile home park zone in Tryon.

The proposed zone would run from Grover Industries down Capps Road to Thompson & Daughter.

The town zoning ordinance does not now provide any area for mobile homes.

"If you don't have one (an area designated), you pretty much open up the door to problems," Mayor Bob Neely told the council Monday night.

The council agreed to set a public hearing for 6:45 p.m. on Feb. 17, its regular meeting date.

In other business:

- * The council decided to set a public hearing at the same time as the mobile home hearing to consider a zoning amendment restricting the location of any adult establishments.

- * The council approved a

Jackson Featured In 'Come Blow Your Horn'

Jim Jackson, well known local civic leader, is featured in the comedy Come Blow Your Horn, Tryon Little Theater's next attraction, that will be presented at Tryon Fine Arts Center March 5, 6, 7 and 8.

Come Blow Your Horn is the tale of a father who wants his two sons to settle down to being good businessmen, in his business and to getting married and providing him with some grandsons. The sons, however, do not see eye-to-eye with their father.

Making his fourth TLT appearance, Jackson will portray the father, known simply as Mr. Baker. Incidentally, eleven years and ten hits after the opening of Come Blow Your Horn in New York, playwright Neil Simon admitted that the character of the father in the Communication

To All the Fine Citizens of Landrum:

I'm writing in reference to a story that appeared in the Tryon Daily Bulletin Monday, Jan. 27th. In the story it is pointed out that the Landrum water system is a separate entity from the city operations. Thus statement is true, however the water department is still under the control of the whole city council. I believe that you the voting public elected all council members to protect your rights and interests throughout all aspects of city government.

In a regular council meeting held on Jan. 17, 1990 a resolution was brought before council that stated, "Approval by Council is required for the purchase of any goods or services in the amount of $500 or more." This resolution was passed by a unanimous vote of council. In another regular council meeting held Nov. 12, 1991 a motion to impose a spending freeze "on all new purchases" was voted on by council, again this motion passed by a unanimous vote.

It is with the voter's right to know and these two actions by council in mind that I asked questions as to why a purchase of $1,300 for inventory parts for the Landrum water works was made. At no point in the previously mentioned council actions does it state "with exception" to the water department.

I would like to thank you the
