The weather Tuesday, high 82, low 54, hum. 50 percent. We understand the Rutherford County Arts Council will soon announce its intention to build a replica of the famous Globe Theater in the Alexander Mills community, just off Hwy. 74 across the line from Polk County.

The Globe, an oak-timbered polygonal structure was built in 1599 and rebuilt in 1613 in Southwark, England, across the River Thames from London. Besides being the outlet for Shakespeare's works, the greatest burst of theatrical genius in history, the Globe also represented the pinnacle of English timber framing. The Rutherford council is committed to building an authentic oak timber frame structure. The oak timbers to be found are massive, starting with 12x12s at the sills.

This project represents another asset to the region, and located on Hwy. 74 just across the border from Polk, is sure to bring Polk County many visitors.

Stott Breaks Record

Ty Stott, first baseman for the Spartanburg Methodist College baseball team, recently broke the school record with 22 doubles. The previous record was 18.

Spartanburg Methodist College was the winner of the Region 10 Baseball Tournament played May 9-12 at Granite Falls. SMC won 4 out of 5 games, defeating Louisburg to become Tournament Champions. They will now host the Eastern District Tournament beginning May 15 in Spartanburg.

Ty, the son of James and Peggy Stott of Columbus, will graduate from Spartanburg Methodist on May 16. He plans to continue playing baseball.

Communication

Dear Jeff:

The Community Reporter who wrote your Wed., May 6th, review of the drama The Diary of Anne Frank deserves the same accolades he/she heaped upon the performance itself. The well-defined expertise of the acting, the directing, the set designing, the fitness of every actor and actress for every part they played was expressed in such a graphic way. It was almost like attending the performance. Your reporter turned his/her review into an artistic eloquence that stands on its own.

Legalities Debated In Landrum Voting

Defenders of two seemingly separate Landrum voting issues claimed legal proof of illegalities on the "other side", during a standing-room-only Landrum Town Council meeting Tuesday at the Landrum Depot.

The Landrum Town Council continued, by a 3-2 vote, an ordinance to create single-member districts before electing two additional councilmen.

Introduced by Mayor Robert Cogdell, the continuation was approved by Cogdell, Hollis Constance and Ray Mayfield. Doug Brannon and Fred Williams opposed the continuation of the single-member district ordinance to which they have objected all along.

Earlier the council turned down, again in a 3-2 vote, a motion by Brannon to accept an ordinance to elect two new councilmen at-large. Such an election was called for on the original referendum petition. Brannon said he would have the voters on the same ballot choose whether to change the town's voting method from at-large to single-member district elections.

Williams seconded Brannon's motion. Cogdell, Constance and Mayfield, however, voted it down.

The three councilmen, who are presently named in a civil suit charging them with holding up an election, are not alone in their position.
