

LATE BULLETIN DESCRIBES BOLL WEEVIL CONTROL MEASURE FOR NORTH CARO

Raleigh, April 8.—The Barch, 1924, bulletin of the state department of agriculture describes in detail the habits and control measures for the cotton boll weevil in North Carolina according to findings by investigators of the experiment station staff. The work reported on in this bulletin was done at the field station of the division of entomology at Aberdeen and is the first actual result, given of experimental work under North Carolina conditions. Other reports have been issued from time to time giving results of field demonstrations testing out methods advocated by the government and other agencies. The new bulletin gives the results of scientific study made up until the present time.

The bulletin describes the habits and development of boll weevil under North Carolina conditions; tells about when the first weevils appear in the spring; how the new ones develop in the squares; when egg laying begins, summer development and gives in detail control measures tested out under actual field conditions.

The authors of the bulletin find that a single application of a sweetened poisoned mixture made when squares begin to form will kill some of the over-wintering weevils. This mixture is applied in the bud, using about one gallon of the mixture per acre. It was found that this application would apparently delay the arrival of heavy infestation later. The Florida method has possibilities but did not show up as a good control measure under the tests made at Aberdeen. The dust poison method was highly profitable and should by all means be used following the application of the pre-square poisoning with sweetened mixtures. This dust poison is applied when the infestation reaches ten percent.

The bulletin gives valuable information about the life history of the boll weevil under North Carolina conditions and will be sent free to citizens of the state making a request for same. A card to the editor, Agricultural Extension Service, Raleigh, will bring your copy.

THE FAMILY GARDEN NECESSARY THIS YEAR

Raleigh, April 8.—The advent of the cotton boll weevil into North Carolina calls for more diversified farming and the growing of sufficient vegetables and fruit for home use. In the past the growing of vegetables has been neglected in eastern Carolina, but with the changing conditions many people are now giving more attention to this important phase of agriculture, says R. F. Payne, extension horticulturist for the state college of Agriculture.

Mr. Payne states that every farm home in North Carolina should have a home garden large enough to give a sufficient supply of vegetables for the table every day in the year. Vegetables form a very important part of the diet, and no meal is complete without some. Our bodies demand certain elements to keep them in good working order. If these elements are not supplied and in the right amounts, the penalty is poor health and higher doctor bills.

"Children are not receiving their just and lawful birthright unless they are supplied with the necessary food for developing strong and healthy bodies," says Mr. Payne. "Many parents are willing to work early and late in order to give their children some of the advantages they didn't have, and yet they overlook the all-year garden, something that costs very little and give a profitable and varied return."

"The surplus vegetables can be sold locally at a good profit. There is always a demand for good, fresh vegetables and they can easily be grown in the home garden. A regular and profitable trade can quickly be built up with the surplus, and thus a good cash crop is provided for practically every month in the year."

"The size of the home garden depends upon the size of the family and the amount of vegetables desired for local sales. Every garden should contain some of the following: Leaf crops—lettuce, cabbage, spinach, kale, parsley, beet tips, collards, turnip tops; Petiole crops—celery, rhubarb; Stem crops—asparagus, potatoes, kohlrabi; Bulb crops—onion; Root crops—carrots, turnips, cets, radishes, sweet potatoes; Fruit crops—tomatoes, egg plant, peppers, string beans, sweet corn, cucumbers, cantaloupes, watermelons, squash; seed crops—beans, peas."

Most anybody would rather be right than president in a time like this.

WHERE DOOBED MEET DEATH BY LETHAL GAS

Authorities seem divided in their opinion as to the humaneness of Nevada's new method of meting out capital punishment to murderers—namely, death by lethal gas. The Nevada State Penitentiary officials who recently carried out the execution by gas of Gee Jon, Chinese slayer, however, maintain that it is more humane than either hanging or electrocution.

The sale of Tuberculosis Christmas seals for 1923 in North Carolina was the largest in the history of the seal sale movement by $7,542.20, the total sale being $50,635.71. For the year previous, 1922, the seal sale of the state amounted to $43,093.51.

The future of North Carolina's lumber industry is bound up in the forest lands owned by the farmer.

Spend a Glorious Easter in Richmond

OF ALL the days in the year, Easter, with its lovely traditions, its joy and its optimism, is the time to visit Richmond. The streets of this interesting old capital are radiant with the color of spring styles. Grace Street, the "Fifth Avenue" of Richmond, is the brilliant scene of a fashion parade reminiscent of the old South. It is a sight worthy of a trip to this delightful city.

Of course, a trip to Richmond means a visit to Miller & Rhoads Store. Now, decked out in complete new spring stocks of merchandise and the newest Fifth Avenue styles, it is The Easter Store. Every department, with its new stocks displayed on counter and shelf, is full of the suggestion of Easter and spring! It is a delight just to wander through the aisles and see the new spring goods. The ready-to-wear sections on the second floor are a veritable fashion show of women's wear—definite proof that Miller & Rhoads are Fashion-First and Fashion-Right!

If you come to Richmond, you are welcome at Miller & Rhoads. Shop or rest in our comfortable, big store as you wish. If you have not been here recently, you will find it greatly changed. The new addition, for which you waited so long and patiently, is now at your service. You will find practically everything new—except the spirit of fair dealing and good value. That is just as it always has been and always will be!

You may, perhaps, find the salespeople more willing, if possible, and more helpful than ever. For this splendid big store is a more pleasant place to work as well as shop. There are comforts here for employees as well as customers. We are always glad to show you the cheery big lunch-room where we serve meals to our employees at cost, and the big, roomy rest-rooms for their recreation. They are just as much a part of our store and as necessary to our best service to you as the rest-rooms and tea-rooms we have provided for our customers.

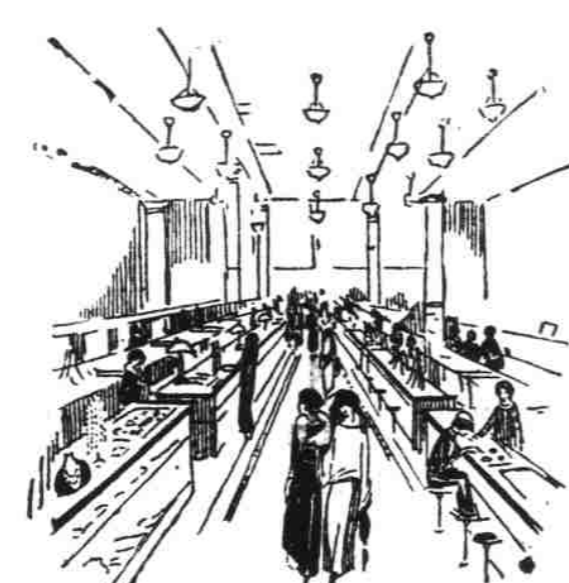

While in Richmond for Easter, make Miller & Rhoads your headquarters. Check parcels and baggage free at our check-room, refresh yourself in one of the rest-rooms, and shop at your leisure. Luncheon or tea is served in the beautiful tea-rooms on the fifth floor. One of the six centrally located elevators will take you there in a jiffy.

If you can't get what you want in your own locality, try
