

FIVE CONFEDERATE LEADERS ARE CHOSEN FOR STONE MOUNTAIN'S ENDURING FAME

Raleigh, Sept. 29.—North Carolina's five generals of the Confederate army to be placed with Lee and Jackson on the Stone Mountain memorial to the Confederacy are Lieut. D. H. Hill, Maj.-Gen. R. F. Hoke, Maj.-Gen. Stephen Ramseur, Brig.-Gen. W. D. Pender and Brig.-Gen. Bryan Grimes.

Lieutenant-General Hill was a native of Mecklenburg county and the father of the late D. H. Hill, former president of State college. Major-General Hoke was from Lincoln county and an uncle of Chief Justice W. A. Hoke, of the North Carolina supreme court. Major-General Ramseur also was from Lincoln county. Brigadier-General Grimes was from Pitt county and the father of the late secretary of state, J. Bryan Grimes. Brigadier-General Pender was a native of Edgecombe county.—Morning Star.

THE FARMER SHOULD VISIT HIS COUNTY AND STATE FAIRS (Editorial Farming)

Every farmer should visit his county and state fairs. It is at these institutions that the thoughtful observer obtains a proper conception of the business of farming and clear views of its possibilities. In the individual and county exhibits are seen the variety of crops that are grown; and how, with good seed and approved cultural methods, quality has been improved and yields increased. He sees the interest that men in the displays by the farmers who installed them, and discovers that these growers, as a rule, are making encouraging headway in farming where others, less interested and less enterprising, are standing still or losing ground. It is the same with exhibits of poultry, cattle, sheep and hogs. He sees the best win the premiums, and the reasons why. He probably knows that some breeds give larger returns for their care and feed than others, but this fact is clearly impressed on his mind as he views the exhibits, and he can better understand the importance of applying the power of such knowledge in efforts to advance his own interests. "Farmers should teach each other," said an early writer on successful farming. They do this at their fairs, but the farmer who stays at home derives no benefit from the lessons.

And there are many other exhibits that may be seen and studied with profit, the most important being the displays of farm implements and machinery and barn and farm home equipment. As stated in another article in this issue, "the farmer pays for the machinery he needs, even if he doesn't buy it." This is true, and it is also true that if he doesn't buy it he pays a big price for it. Therefore, it behooves the farmer to learn all he can about the time and labor-saving machinery that has been put on the market by manufacturers. Very few farmers are properly equipped, and this is not because the farmers of the country are unable to buy the equipment, but because they do not always appreciate its value. Government statistics show that in 1923, out of each dollar spent by farmers eight cents went for automobiles and three cents for farm equipment (all kinds.) That is to say, the greater part of the eight cents went for luxuries, while the three cents for farm equipment was spent to help make the crops to enable the farmer to buy these luxuries. This is not as it should be. The eight cents of the farmer's dollar should have been invested in money-making and profit-making machinery. This would have enabled the farmers to buy better automobiles and to afford more luxuries than they now enjoy. Study the machinery exhibits made at the fairs, and the literature given out by dealers. And don't stop with displays of equipment used in the fields. Few farm homes are as well equipped as they might be, and the farm home should be made the best of all homes. For something near the cost of the lowest priced automobile—and in some cases for a much smaller outlay—the home may have electric lights and running water—and the same system will give light and water in all the farm buildings. Light and water systems will probably be found among the exhibits. If you have not installed a system in your home, don't pass such exhibits as if they were of little interest and value. If the wife is along, give her time to help the exhibitor explain their merits. She'll do this, and you may be surprised at her familiarity with all the details, as well as her knowledge of what it takes to make a house a home, and housework a pleasure instead of a wearisome, never-ending job.

EXTENSION SPECIALISTS WILL HELP AT STATE FAIR

Raleigh, Sept. 27.—Special attention will be given to agricultural problems by the extension specialists and investigators of the State College Extension and Experiment station at the State Fair to be held in Raleigh during the week of Oct. 13-17. In addition to acting as heads of the departments. In this way they will assist in the disbursement of nearly $20,000 that is offered as premiums.

An interesting feature of the fair will be the contests by boy and girl clubs, prize winners in the various districts and counties. Teams will come from each district and will give demonstrations showing how club work is conducted and from these teams will be determined the state prize winners.

Mrs. Jane S. McKimmon, in charge of the Women's Building, will have a lavish display of work being done by rural women. In the livestock department, indications point toward the greatest number of entries yet recorded and Prof. R. S. Curtis states that at present this department is one of the most promising features of the fair. In the department of field crops which includes the individual farm, community and county exhibits, Prof. C. B. Williams states that a number of exhibits have already been entered and that there will be keen competition. The poultry department will also be filled as usual. Allen G. Oliver reports that the poultry club members are determined to carry off most of the prizes this year. There will be a large display of horticultural crops according to Prof. C. D. Matthews and the State Department of Agriculture will have its usual educational exhibit in the horticultural building.

THE QUALIFICATIONS

To be a man is: To respect my country, my profession and myself. To be honest and fair with my fellow men as I expect them to be honest and square with me. To be a man whose name carries prestige wherever it goes. To be willing to pay the price of success in honest effort. To look upon my work as an opportunity to be seized with joy and made the most of, and not as a painful drudgery to be reluctantly endured. To remember that success lies within myself, my own brain, my own ambition, my own courage and determination. To expect difficulties and force my way through them, to mix brain with my efforts and use system and method in my work. To find time to do every needful thing by never letting time find me doing nothing. To keep my future unmortgaged by debts, to save as well as earn. Finally; to take a good trip on the joys of life. To play the game like a man. To fight against nothing so hard as my weakness; and endeavor to grow in strength—So I may be courteous to man, faithful to friends, and trust to God. —Thomas Van Alstyne.

BACK TO THE WOODPILE FOR YOU

(By Phil Stern.)

Cal you are cool But not very wise Those seeking election Don't antagonize. You have no love For those who toil Who, to earn a living Their hands must soil. The Boston police Will never forget And next November You'll regret. And make no mistake Its the safest bet That its back to the wood-pile for you.

Cal that you're honest We all of us knew. But the gang you are with Is a pirate crew. They looted the oil To be used by our Navy. They all had their spoon Deep in the gravy. You vetoed the bonus, For our soldiers, that's true. Though they fought the good fight, For me, and for you. And the Veteran Fund squandered, By your Friends too, So its back to the wood-pile for you.

So back to the wood-pile, And there wield the ax. For refusing to lighten The load on our backs. The Postman's pay You refused to raise Though press and public Their work do praise. So the men in blue And the men in grey Next Nov. will have their say And its back to the wood-pile for you.

Officials of the Bank of Millstadt, Illinois, are said to have taken unusual precautions, inaugurating a "safety-before-business" policy. Persons having business in the bank are required to rap for admission. After the cashier has satisfied himself as to the identity of a patron he is permitted to enter.

A school for prison officials is to be opened in Peking as part of a general preparation for the coming of the judicial commission to investigate China's fitness for assuming authority voter foreigners now vested in foreign consular courts.

Judge Alfred J. Talley, of the General Sessions in New York City, while inducing into office a new jurist said, "One of the things that you will come to learn is that you have come on the bench of the greatest criminal court in the world, and the oldest court of any kind in the United States, at a time when this country is suffering under an indictment which proclaims it to be the most lawless on earth. You will find that the United States must plead guilty to that indictment. Most of the desperate criminals are mere boys. You will be heartbroken at discovering that the vast majority of defendants are under nineteen or twenty years old. That is going to be your most distressing problems."
