PROSPECTUS OF THE North Carolina Telegraph.

THE paper favorably known to the community under the title mentioned above, has been transferred from the hands of its present editor, to those of the individual whose name appears at the foot of this prospectus, and will be issued under his auspices from and after the 7th of November next. Its name and politics will undergo no change. As it has been, it will continue to be, an advocate and expounder of the doctrines of the Whig Party, and a firm and faithful defender of the Rights and Honor of the South. As a Whig Press, it will be decided, yet liberal, extending to those who entertain a different political faith, that courtesy, which it will expect in return; and as a Southern press, while it will stand always ready, like the sentinel upon the watch tower, to give the alarm, and arouse to action in times of difficulty and of danger, will still cherish an affectionate attachment to the Union, and will desert it only, when it can be no longer preserved, with safety or honor.

It will advocate the doctrine of non-intervention by Congress, with reference to Slavery in the Territories, both because its opposite is unconstitutional, and because it is the only principle which will, in future, save the South, and prevent those evils, which have disturbed and are now disturbing, the peace of our country. Regarding the nation as a whole, with a community o feeling and interest, it would favor a tariff for revenue, with incidental protection to American industry. But while the North is arrayed against the South, and the unhappy dissensions which now divide us remain unheated. it will oppose protection, in any form, with all the power which it may possess.

It has been thought necessary to specify this much with reference to the great topics which have lately engaged so much of public attention. In regard to other matters, suffice it to say that it will, as stated above, be found acting with the body of the great '\ hig l'ar y.

It will be the effort of the editor, to render his sheet as interesting and attractive as any within the limits of the State; an object w. ich he hopes he will be able to compass, since from his location, Guldsborough, he will possess advantages for the early dissemination of news which no other place in Eastern Carolina can furnish and since, for the fairer portion of his readers, he will not lorget to cull many a flower from the fields of History.

The Pelegraph will be issued on Thursday of each week, at I'wo Dollars per annum, if paid in advance; two dollars and fitty cents after the expiration of three months and three dollars at the end of the year. Postmasters, and persons to wnom this Prospectus i sent, are requested to act as agents; and all so acting and torwarding the names of six subscribers, shall be entitled to a copy of the paper. Those forwarding three name shall receive a copy at the rate of one dollar. GEO. V. STRONG,

Editor and Proprietor, Guldsboro, N. C. Papers friendly to the enterprise will please copy.

A new way of callsting Recruits.

There is no class of people for whom the countrymen of the Southern States have so great PRINCE ANTICLES, PATENT MUNICIPES.

A dislike as those wearing fine clothes, and there dent of a visit lately made by Lewis Gaylord with a large and fresh stock of articles in his five, see is no surer way of becoming unpopular with Clark to the "Old 76 House," at the village of them than by going among them fashionably dressed. This aversion extended as far back as the Revolutionary War, as the following incident will show: During the Revolution, a Capt. E-, a member of one of the first families of Charleston, having lost in a skirmish most of his men, went to Sules, Confectry Senna, Emory, Peruvian Bark, Shop Furniture, Vials, Corks, 4c., &c. CHEMICALS.—Calomel, Sulph, Quini.e, Sulph, and Act. Morphine, Syrup Iodide of Iron, Strychnine, Iodides vous, he spent a day or two in looking around Focketing these interesting mementos of the the country. At the time and place appointed, he found a large number assembled, not one of whom would enlist. After several bours spent to no purpose he appointed a rendezvous for the next day, and left the ground. Next day came and with it the same crowd-but he met with no the sweet scented grass lay in swaths around; and more success than before. What could be the where the mower had stopped in his labors, there matter? It was the first time during the war that lay his scythe and whetstone. Little faith had a recruiting officer had been entirely unsuccess- our companion that "Old Knick" could defuly ful. Something must be wrong, and he deter- wield that instrument of "Old Tempus;" but ask mined to know what it was. Calling one of the him now. Ask him if we didn't make the little rustics aside, he asked: "Why is it that I get no recruits?" "You don't think," answered the countryman, that we are goin' to 'list under such a man as you are!- You are dressed too fine to be much of a fighter." In those days knee breeches and silk stockings were fashionable, and the Captain was dressed in us, we next repaired to the old house. It was that style; there lay his unpopularity. He turned to the countryman; and said; "So you object to my dress do you? Very well. Come here to morrow, and I shall have recruits." Next day the same crowd had assembled, antious to know what new idea the dandy captain had got into his head. After the crowd had as- were most agreably lively for persons so old, and sembled, Capt. E. stepped out and said in a clear were obligingly communicative. "Many and and distinct voice: "My friends, I understand that you object to me because I am dressed a little finer than yourselves. You think I am unable to fight on that count. Now I wish to make a proposition to you. I will whip as many of you as will come used, going to a cupboard, "he used to keep his out, one at a time, with the understanding that things, and here's the very bowl he used to make every man is to enlist after he is whipped. Pick his wine sangaree into; and they used to pass it your men and send them out." After a short consultation, a huge, broad shoullered fellow came out. The Captain drew off his coat very coolly. He was large and well made, and a superior boxer. The country man rushed up, intending to brush out the Captain in a few minutes. He mistook his man, however, and soon measured his length on the grass.

A greater bully than the first stepped out to He was a stout fellow weighing about 280 lbs. dre myself when he was a swingin' and I seen and bragged that he never had been whipped .- him when he was dug up; and so did you, too, He knew nothing, however, about boxing, and Polly, didn't you!" The old lady mentioned a he very soon followed his companions. Never circumstance connected with the revolution, and was a crowd so utterly confounded! Three of with this spot, that struck us as interesting and their best men whipped by a man from the city!

notionless. have no objection now to follow their example!"

you'll do to tie to, old fellow. Come boys, fall in." he could find room for .- Yankee Blade. ....

TAKING THE CENSUS .- Alvin Richardson, of the revolution, to some others of which western part of New York in taking the census, communicates to the Oswego Times the following amusing illustration of the facility with which a man may be misled by answers that are direct and true, but "nothing else :"

I must now tell you of a joke I had put on me n the good town of Palerino. I called in at a house early one morning, and saw a young girl whom I took to be ten or twelve years old. I told her my business, which she took very coolly. I asked her, "is your father a farmer ?"-She answered, "he is." "Is he at home?" "He s." "Is he in the house ?" "I suppose he is." Will be give me the information !" "I suppose he will." I waited awhile, and then asked 'Have you a mother?" "I have." "Is she at home?" "She is." "Will she be in soon?"-"Can'tsay." "Is she gone from home !" "She Well, I saw there was but one room to the house, and had got tired of waiting. I spoke to the girl, saying, "Where is your fathr?" The same answer, "he is at home."-Well, where is he !" Same answer, "he is at home." "Well, where is your mother !" "Why, at home." "Where in the name of common sense is their home ?" "Why, just over on the other street." Feeling rather chagrined, I asked, "Who is the head of this family !" She answered promptly, "My husband, sir." "Are you mar-"Yes." "Have you any children !"-"Two." "How old are the children?" "Two years." "How old is the other?" "Two years." "How is that?" "Very easy, sir; they are twins !" This solved the whole mystery. They are fine looking boys: she is the youngest-looking mother I ever saw. It shows how easy a matter it is to be mistaken.

THE TEARS OF OYSTERS .- Glancing round this anatomical workshop, we find, amongst other things, some preparations showing the nature of pearls. Examine them, and we will find that there are dark and dingy pearls, just as there are interrupted in their journey, were the bona fide handsome and ugly men; the dark pearl being found on the dark shell of the fish, the white. brilliant one upon the smooth, inside shell. Going further in the search, we find that the smooth glittering lining, upon which the fish moves, is known as the narre, and that it is produced by a portion of the animal called the mantie; and for explanation sake we may add, that gourmands practically know the mantle as the beard of the oyster. When living in its glossy house, should any foreign substance find its way through the shell to disturb the smoothness so essential to its ease, the fish coates the offending substance with nacre, and a pearl is thus formed. The pearl is, in fact, a little globe of the smooth, glossy substance yielded by the oyster's beard; yielded ordinarily to smooth the narrow home to which his nature binds him, but yielded in round drops -real pearly tears-if he is hurt. When a beauty glides proudly among a throng of admirers, her hair clustering with pearls, she little thinks that her ornaments are products of pain and diseased action, endured by the most unpoetical of shell-fish .- Hovsekold Words.

Old Women of the '76 House.

What relates to Washington, and the war he led in, can never be tiresome. Here is an inci-

Tappan, and related in the editorial gossip of the July Knick. Arrived at the "Seventy-Six House," we ex-mined the room where Major Andre was confined, and from which he went forth to die. Our friend, and the jotter down hereof, were made happy by a present, from the obliging proprietor of the house, of two of the pictured tiles which compose a framework around the fire place.past, we next repaired to an old, erumbling, lowcooled mansion, once the head-quarters, of Gen. Washington. We drew rein at the gate, and passed into a little patch of meadow that lay between us and the house. It was about half mown; meadow resound with the cling clang of the whetstone, and then, seizing the sharpened instrument with long, sweeping strokes, lay as close cut and clean a swath around that field as he ever saw in his life. There are several things that we can't do-but we can mow! Well, rejoicing in the glow which that best of all exercise had given more than a hundred years old, and the very personification of decay. We entered, and were cordially welcomed by its occupants, two elderly ladies, who were born in the house. Nothing could be in more perfect keeping with the mansion than those two women. One was nearly eighty, and the other turned of seventy, but both many a time," said the elder of the two, "in this very room, has Gen. Washington held me in his lap. I remember it just as well as if it was but yesterday. He was a most lovely man, Gen. Washington was-lovely! Here," she continround from one officer to another, when they come to see him. He seen a good deal of com-pany, Gen. Washington did." We spoke of Major Andre. "Oh," said the old lady, "I seen him more'n titty times. He was a handsome man, and he was a kind man. I seen him the very morning they took him to the top of the hill to hang him. Every body felt sorry for him."

We asked how Gen. Washington seemed to feel on the occasion. "Oh, he must ha' felt dreadake his place, and soon took his place on the ful! He walked back and for ards all that ground. The countrymen stared. They had morning in this very room; and I've hearn Pop no idea that such a man could fight. He had, Blanvelt says that he never see him feel so bad however, enlisted two men, and must not be all afore. He kept looking at his watch every now lowed to go farther. The bully of the crowd and then, and was oneasy till the time had come, now stepped out to take the gentleman in hand. and Major Andre was hung. I seen Major An-They could hardly realize it, and stood perfectly seem were in the habit of coming sometimes into the rich valley of Tappan, and driving off cattle, "Well, my friends, are you satisfied?" I have sheep, etc. "One day Pop Blanvelt's nigger enlisted three of your best men; I suppose you boy Jim, hearing some of 'em coming drove all our cattle into the swamp, and when they come "Not a bit of it," responded one of the crowd, up he told 'em he hadn't seen no cattle, and so They did so, and in a short time the captain this, that he told him he might have his liberty, and his company filled, and offers of more than but Jim wouldn't; he stayed with him more's forty years a'ter that." And thus these good old people beguiled an hour with reminiscences one of the assistant marshals employed in the may have occasion to refer to bereafter. Our ride home in the evening was made doubly pleasant by all that we had seen and heard, and we retired to rest to dream of other days, and of the "times that tried men's souls,"

> HIGHWAY ROBBERY BY MISTAKE .- The following singular adventure is related in the French journals: A party of gentlemen met a few days since for a day's shooting in the neighborhood of Montereau. The house in which the sportsmen spent the night was situate half way up a declivity overlooking the high road. At about two o'clock in the morning, one of the inmates hearing a noise, raised a cry that their vehicle was stolen. The party was soon astir, and hearing a noise of wheels, as of a coach going off, seized their weapons and rushed out in pursuit of the thieves, whom they soon succeeded in coning up with, thanks to a cross cut. The first of the party on the spot, immediately seized the horses' heads and stopped the carriage short .--The people inside the carriage immediately began to cry "Thieves!"-a degree of audacity at which our sportsmen grew exasperated, and cocking their guns they levelled them at the driver. The latter personage, together with the individ-uals inside the carriage were seized with terror at this demonstration, and precipitating themselves from their seats rushed off into a neighbouring coppier, where they were presently lost sight of. Congratulating themselves on the recovery of their carriage, the sportsmen returned with it in triumph, dead beaten, but swelling with pride at their exploit. It was now determined the carriage should be safely secured in the coach house, but was their surprise at finding the place already occupied by their own carriage which the servant had placed there the night before, without their knowledge. The cry of "thieves," which they had considered as the height of audacity on the part of the travellers, was now accounted for, and the gentlemen thus owners of the carriage which they had been too glad to abundon to save their lives, threatened by a band of armed ruffians. The affair was serious, and in order to avoid the accusation of robpery on the Republic's highway, accompanied with violence and other aggravating circumstances, it was deemed expedient before retiring to rest, to knock up the authorities and apprise them of the circumstances on which they relied for their defence.

Civilization already begins to enervate the people of the Far West. Last month a piano made its appearance in Hard Scrabble, while the landlord of the "Fighting Bears," who nobly resisted the innovation of table cloths, has been compelled to strike his colors to a "Yankee," who advertises "clean plates at every meal."
