A Fine Set of Teeth for 25 Cents.
White Teeth, Foul Breath, Healthy Gums.
Yellow and unhealthy teeth, after being once or twice cleaned with JONES' AMBER TOOTH PASTE, have the appearance of the most beautiful ivory, and at the same time it is so perfectly innocent and exquisitely fine, that it is constantly used by highly advanced, even to those teeth that are in good condition, giving them a beautiful polish, and preventing a premature decay. Those already decayed, it prevents from becoming worse—it also fastens such as are becoming loose, and by perseverance it will render the loosest teeth delicately white, and make the breath deliciously sweet.

SONG FOR ELECTION DAY.
We're going to make a President,
We want you all to come, There's bound to be a mighty fuss,
And lots and lots of fun;
We're not agoin to electioneer, Or lead you off the track, But merely light about a man They sometimes call Old Zach.
Walk up, walk up,
And try to make it handy, Just before you drop your vote,
To think of Rio Grande.

You'll find some fellows over there,
A folding up their tickets, They're mostly men with heads awailed up As if they had the rickets; They've run a man whose name is Cam,
And they'll want to pull you back, But we've a few despatches here,
To send to General Zach.
Walk up, walk up,
Walk up before us,
And when you go to drop your vote Just think of Melancthon.

They'll likely try to spin a yarn About a broken sword,
And how their General got so mad, When Hull the army feared;
We won't deny what they may say,
About their brave defender, But we've a chap in our crowd Who never can surrender.
Walk up, walk up,
And don't you go to halt O,
And when about to drop your vote, Just think of Palo Alto.

We're not agoin to puff our man, Or talk about his virtue, We merely brushed your memory up, Because it couldn't hurt you;
Them other chaps are up to all The talking and the writing, But we've a man who can That mostly does the fighting.
So walk up, walk up,
Walk up once again,
And think before you drop your vote,
Of Duena Vista's plain.

GENERAL TAYLOR:
HIS MORAL, INTELLECTUAL AND PRO-FES-
SIONAL CHARACTER.
Gen. Taylor's Character as drawn by the Hon. J. Crittenden.
Mr. Crittenden's speech to the friends of Taylor and Fillmore, at Murry's yard, (in Pittsburg, Penn.) was almost wholly an eloquent, warmhearted eulogy of the character of General Taylor, public and private.
A few of the points commented on are as follows:
General Taylor is a Whig.—This, the speaker said, he declared from his own knowledge. He is a Whig—a good Whig —a thorough Whig. I know him to be a Whig, but not an ultra Whig. All his political feelings are identified with the Whig party.
General Taylor is an honest man.—On the uprightness of General Taylor's character Mr. Crittenden dwelt with great earnestness, as a trait which he knew, and felt, and admired. He said he was emphatically an honest man, and he defied the opponents of the old soldier to bring aught against him, impeaching his uprightness, in all his transactions, during a public life of forty years. His appearance and manners bear the impress of such sterling honesty, that speculation, meanness, and integrity are frightened from his presence. Gen.
Twigg, who has been on habits of intimate personal intercourse with him, said to the speaker, lately, that there was not a man in the world, who had been in the company of General Taylor five minutes, who would dare make an improper proposition to him. Dishonesty flees from his presence.
General Taylor is a man of great abilities.— His whole military life gave evidence of this. He never committed a blunder, or lost a battle. There is not another man in the army who would have fought the battle of Buena Vista but General Taylor—and not another who would have won it.
Examine the whole history of his exploits, in all their details, and you see the evidence of far-reaching sagacity, and great ability.
General Taylor is a man of learning.— Not mere scholastic learning—he has never graduated at a college—but his mind is richly stored with that practical knowledge which is acquired both from men and books. He is a deeply read man, in all ancient and modern history, and in all matters relating to the practical duties of life, civil and military. He is intimate with Plutarch, said the speaker—a Plutarch hero himself, as bright as ever adorned the page of history. General Gibson has told him, that he and General Taylor had entered the army nearly together, and had served together almost constantly, until he (Gibson) retired, and that during that time they sat together on seventeen courts martial, many of them important and intricate cases, and in every single instance Zachary Taylor had been appointed to draw up the opinion of the court; a brilliant testimony to his superior abilities, and ripe learning, and practical knowledge.
General Taylor's humanity and simplicity of character.—General Taylor is a plain, unassuming, unostentatious, gentlemanly man. There is no pride, no lofty, no airs about him. When in the army he fared just as his soldiers fared—ate the same food—slept under his tent, and underwent similar fatigue; for 18 months, in Mexico, never sleeping in a house one night.

His humanity, kindness, and simplicity of character, had won for him the love of his soldiers. He never kept a guard around his tent, or any pomp or parade. He trusted his soldiers, and they trusted and loved him in return. His heart moved to human woe, and he was careful of the lives of his soldiers, and humane to the enemy, and to the vanquished foe. He is a friend of the masses; there is no aristocracy about him—he is a true democrat. He will adorn the White House, and shed new light over the fading and false Democracy of the day, which has far gone into its near and yellow leaf; he will bring a true, vigorous, val-dant, refreshing Democracy.

General Taylor practices no aim for opin-ion's sake.—He is a good and true Whig; but he will prescribe no man for a difference of opinion. He hates—hates—hates prescription. He loves the free independent utterance of opinion.

General Taylor's position.—Some object, said the speaker, to General Taylor because he is from the South, and is a slave-holder. Are we not one people? Do you not love the Union? Have I not the same rights, as a Kentuckian, to all the benefits of our glorious Union, that you have as Pennsylvania? We are one people from the Atlantic to the Pacific; from our most northern line to the Rio Grande we are one people—it is all one country—it is all yours.
There is no country, there never was a country, like this. Home, in her mightiest days, never possessed so vast and splendid a country as this—so grand, so great, so glorious. Our destiny is as glorious as our country, if we hold together, and do not suffer sectional prejudices to divide us—We speak one language—our identity is the same; we are one consolidated people, and our success has hitherto been glorious and unprecedented. Shall we, then, divide in feeling? No, no! No matter where our man is from, if he is an American. Gen.
Taylor, in his feelings, knows no South, no North, no East, no West. He is an American! Where has he lived? In his tent for forty years. His home, for forty years, has been under the stars and stripes of the American flag—the flag of his whole country.

General Taylor's habits.—He is a temperate man; he never drank a bottle of spirits in his life. His habits are exemplary.
General Taylor's inflexibility of character.— Finally, said the speaker, he is a man you cannot buy—a man you cannot sell—a man you cannot scare—and a man who never surrenders.—Pittsburg Gaz.

BUTLER IN LOUISIANA.—We learn from the New Orleans Bee that the Cam and Butler leaders there are in great consternation at the republication of Butler's speech in Congress, assailing the Coocoo. The Bee says:
"They essay vague denials, frothy rigmarole and personal abuse, but they have not succeeded in disproving a single title of the overwhelming array of evidence against the defamer of Louisiana. Our exposition of facts has stirred up the indignation of those Democrats of Fanatic onsets who were singled out by Gen. Butler, as the special victims of obloquy, and accused of cowardice, want of fealty, an overbearing attachment to frivolous pleasures, and a disposition to commit treason. The Idea of November will exhibit the effect of these atrocious libels."
"In the meanwhile the Coocoo leaders are hugely disgruntled. They know not in what manner to get over the truth. The speech is before them—published in the Congressional Globe—a Coocoo sheet—and probably revised and corrected by Gen. Butler's own hand. What are they to do? Gen. B., we understand, has been written to, and invited to offer some sort of an explanation.
But what can he say? Can he cut his own words? Can he repudiate his own ranting?
Dare he, five years after the delivery of his speech, deny his coocoo contentment? Of course not! Coocooism can look for no prop from him."

THE "SECOND SECOND TROUBANT."—A five dollar bill of the Fulton (New York) Bank passed through the hands of the Journal of Commerce, on the back of which was written as follows:
"This is the last of three thousand dollars left me by my mother at her death, on the 27th day of August, 1840. Would to God she had never left it to me, and that I had been learned to work, to have earned my living, I would not now be what I am."

CONTEMPTIBLE TRACKS.—Mr. Henley, the Coocoo member of Congress from Indiana, has been franking loads of documents to the South to convince the people of that section of the Union that Gen. Taylor is opposed to slavery. Some of the documents thus franked the Louisville Journal says, have been sent back to Indiana with Henley's name upon them and the handwriting has been examined and fully ascertained and admitted to be his. And this Henley whilst thus acknowledged by his own political friends to be franking documents to the South to prove franking documents to slavery is busy Gen.
Taylor opposed to slavery in Indiana to engage in making speeches in Indiana to prove the old General a violent and ultra advocate of slavery!!! This is but one of the recent tricks.—N. Y. Express.

A WHIG STATE ADDRESS has just been put forth in Pennsylvania, congratulatory of the Whigs of the Union. They speak of the late election as a "triumph as brilliant as it is destined to be permanent," and promise all that the friends of Gen. Taylor may desire on the 7th of November.—Selt. Sun.

He who receives a good turn, should never forget it; he who does one, should never remember it.
