REASONS FOR RISIBILITY.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES. Sweet coz! I'm happy when I can, I'm merry while I may, For life's at most a narrow span, At best a winter's day. If care could make the sunbeam went

- A brighter, warmer hue, "- --The evening star shine out more fair, The blue sky look more blue, Then I should be a grave man-But since 'the not the way, Sweet coz! I'm happy when I can, And merry when I may!

If sighs could make us sin the less, Perchance I were not glad-If mourning were the sages dress. My garb should then be sad ; But since the angel's wings are white, And e'en the young saints smile Since virtue wears a brow of light, And vice a robe of guile-Since laughter in not under ban, Nor gladness clad in grey-Sweet coz! I'm happy when I can, And merry when I may!

I've seen a bishop dance and reel, And a sinner fast and pray. A knave at the top of Fortune's wheel, And a good man cast away ! Wine I have seen your grave one's quaff, Might set our fleet affest; But I never heard a hearty hugh From out a Villain's throat : And I never knew a mirthful man Make sad a young maid's day-So coz! I'm happy when I can,

(FOR THE COMMERCIAL.)

And merry when I may!

MR. EDITOR: Being fully satisfied your high regard for my friend Mr. WIL-LIAMS, and the strong grounds taken by your able journal in the great and good cause of Internal Improvement in the good Old North State, I herewith furnish you with but a faint analysis of an able speech delivered by him on the subject referred to. I am afraid I shall not do him justice, as I am but a poor hand to report a speech He spoke to the people of Caintuck, on Saturday the 13th instant; it was their day of muster, and I assure you there was a goodly number present; and I will venture to assert, that there will not be found, hereafter, three men in that district opposed to Internal Improvements. I remarked to him that it was my intention to furnish a sketch of his remarks for publication. was truly delighted; I would walk twenty The Great Mail Route from Char- miles to hear such a speech. He ably portrayed the character of our citizens; the loss of many of our most gifted sons on account of the sucidal policy that had been heretofore pursued in our State, as respects Internal Improvement, and clearly demonstrated, to the satisfaction of his hearers, that the great work in a cause so noble, that had been carried out by the last Legislature, would make our beloved Wilmington what every patriot in our midst desires; a populous and flourishing City. Wrong impressions were made, not with the design, however, of injuring Mr. Will LIAMS, as to his course in the last Legisla They were disposed not to condemn without hearing his defence, and exceptions were not taken in the first place, only by a very few in that District. You are aware, till recently, very little has been said to the people upon Internal Improvements. Politics, to the injury of nearer and dearer interests, have been too much discussed by public prints, and it is not to be wondered at that the great advantages of Internal Improvement, in North Carolina; founded upon a liberal and enlightened pathotism, should be generally so little understood by the mass of the people, who have not the means of knowing and viewing North Carolina as she really is; and if we only had a few such men as Mr. WILLIAMS to rebuke the spirit of demagogueism, and lay facts properly and fairly before the people. we would not have persons here or elsewhere

> It was a great day for old Cain tuck .-All who heard Mr. Williams, if I am not mistaken, feel the necessity of making Wilmington within our own State, a market for a great deal of our North Carolina pro-> opposing the true interests of North Caro-

market in North Carolina, for North Car-olina produce! He pointed out, in a masterly manner, the injury our State has received from the hitherto deadly inertie of her citizens: which was enough to make us truly ashamed for past offences. But he trusted, what had been done would cause the dawn of a new era in our beloved State and, in the language of one of New Hand ver's distinguished sons, now numbered with the dead: I felt as if the " poppy has fallen from the eyes of our people," a that our citizens would, and did see the true course for them to pursue. He trusted that our citizens would not, as heretofore, be found parting with their homesteads that entombed the sacred relics of their sires, for homes in wild and dreary deserts, amid scenes familiar with the tomabawk and scalping knife, and yells of onvage ferosity; he urged the necessity of perseverance in these laudable works. Onward ! said he, should be the watchword of every man, until the body politic in No Carolinashould feel the hearts blood tingle in their valus to every extremity of our social system. That the time, yea, the glorious time, was not far distant, when the eastern and western portions of North Carolina would be welded together by the strong ties of interest and affection. He exhibited the advantages of our beloved Wilmington as a great commercial Mart, laid open to view the vast mineral and agricultural resources of the State. He showed, to a demonstration, the advantages which accrued to the people of the country by the construction of the Wilmington & Raleigh Rail Road; and that the interests of the people of the country and our Wilmington are one and inseparaple-and, he remarked, that as a distinguished Roman met a rich reward for the wisdom which he displayed, in kissing his mother earth as the parent of all mankind, a nobler and higher premium would await unif we would but do our du ty in the great cause of Internal Improvement.

duce. Yes, he proved that we wanted

He told the people that there was tory little probability of his being before the again for the Legislature. He had no idea of suffering impressions being made against him of a false character, of not having act-ed consistently with previous declarations made by him to the people of Caintuck when he had occasion to respectfully soll cit their suffrages. He had done his de and to the extent of his abilities had endea vored to make himself worthy of their confidence, by guarding and protecting the particular interests that had been confided his care, and he rendered a most satisfacto Ty account of his stewardship, and pro clearly, that he had not, as had hear of ed, been humbugged into the support of m sures foreign to the principles and policy of the party with whom he had acted. He told of their recorded votes in favor of Hoke, the friend of Internal Improvement of the distinguished men of his party Legislature who were wedded to that poliey, and that no blame could justly be im puted to him, as he could readily find shelter under their shade for his protection Mr. Williams proved clearly that he would have been recreant to the trums confided to his keeping, had he acted otherwise. And assure you, Sir, that he received from that portion of his constituency whom he addressed "the most cheering of all human rewards"-the plaudit of " well done good and faithful servant !" INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT.

MUSTACHES.

There is no civilized animal that looks respectable in Mustaches, but grimalkin. To her they are quite becoming, for they suggest at once ideas of use and fitness. But a man in mustaches-a human being with purrers-is an object supremly ridiculous. If they are of no use to him-and of this there can be no doubt-do they add any thing to his beauty? To an officer, military, or naval, there may, but not to a citizen, not to a bry whose cheeks are hardly maorable. Young gentleman who cultivate mustaches are like boys when first breeched, they strut about and fancy themselves men; but no one but themselves is cheat-

He must have been a bold fellow who ndited the above, for if known, there is but little doubt that like Absalom he would fall a victim to hair. In England the age for whiskers and mustaches is so great, that the office of barber has become a sinecure—that ancient profession receiving now the same recompense for thinning the hairy crops in the corners of a man's mouth, as they did formerly for denuding the whole face of the excressence. Shakespeare says something about "the more hair the less wit;" but he being as lightly bearded as a spear of wheat, and bald withal, is not so good authority upon this subject as some others, and cannot therefore be quoted as giving to "A-airy nothings a local habitation and a name

ed in the belief of it.
