From N. O. Delta. HORRIBLE TRAGEDY IN CUBA.

Whole No. 560

We received yesterday, per brig Adams Gray, from our attentive Havana corres pondent, some interesting details of an affair of late occurrence in Cuba, which, in atrocity, unnatural brutality, and complicated tragedy, nearly equals the horrible story of the Borgias. Condensed from the documents sent us by our correspondent, the facts of the case are as follows:

In the district of the Pina del Rio, there resided, some time ago, a wealthy planter, whose christian name was Don lose. This man, or rather brute in human form, had been for some time living criminally with his own daughter, to the knowledge of his wife and mother, who, however, was afraid to excite the brutal vengeance of the monster, by denouncing and exposing his crime. But as the daughter began to bloom into womanhood, the sense of shame and degradation beginning to operate upon her mind, she determined to resist the approaches of the unnatural parent. She threatened to proclaim his infamy, and denounce him before the tribunals, if he perished in his atrocities. Shortly after this the poor girl was found in her bed cruelly murdered. The father was arrested, tried, found guilty, and sentenced to be executed by the garrote, a kind of guillotine, which extinguishes life by means of a sharp wire, which is our country, or to a future immortality, made by a certain spring to penetrate the spine of the victim, as he sits in a chair or stocks. To execute this sentence, the pubhe functionary, as he is styled in legal parlance, or in plain language, the executioner, was sent from Havana. Now, as this individual is held in great horror by the people, who has lately been threatened with a visitation from him, on account of their aspirations for liberty, it was deemed prudent to lodge the executioner in a secure place. He was therefore provided with quarters in the district prison, in the same apartment with several felons, who were with him. inmates of the prison did not appreciate his up the staircase, and succeeded in reachcompany, and had thus rid themselves of ing her room.

But this story did not impose upon the into ascertain the truth by the application of the mystery, one of the most murderous looking of the accused was tied up so tightly, that by the marest accident in the world, he was quite unable to give the dedown, he bowed his head affirmatively .-

The Captain General has sent down and suggests that he should follow the example of the District Governor, and hang a few individuals connected with this rigid annli-cation of the torture.

He was dead!

There being no applicant for the office of Executioner, the abandoned murderer of his own child, was taken out and shot by a file of soldiers. These are the simple facts of this affair, which are sufficiently tragical without the episodical additions of the horror-loving Spaniards of Havana. They are sufficient to illustrate the benighted state of morals and of the administration of justice of it? Can any think be more simple? in this unhappy and oppressed island.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The following extracts are from a letter written by Judge McLean, of the U.S. Supreme Court, on accepting the Presidency of the American Sunday School Union.

"When we consider these schools as the nurseries of society, we cannot too highly appreciate them. The children are taken as tender plants-every noxious branch is the prisons of the Inquisition of Rome .cut off, and the ground is so prepared as They were confined for political offences to impart the utmost vigor and healthfulness. Under such care the fruit must be good. The mind and heart of a child may be as certainly for good works by moral training, as the plant may be improved by careful culture.

"Who can estimate the influence on society of five inillions of children thus educated And it may not be an extravagant calculation to suppose that, every ten themselves by moral considerations, their would have been placed with the other side example may have some influence on an up I" equal number of their associates. Here, then, is an element of power which must be salutary on our social and political relations. The good thus done, cannot be fully known and appreciated, as the amount of evil which it prevents cannot be

were equal to the cruise. and Hancook, and Adams, and their patriots, were good men, as well as g Providence, and to the precepts of the Bible. These they observed in their pub he and private acts, and thereby inculca-ted the same rule of action upon others.

"To reform all abuses and perpetuate our institutions, we need only the force of such examples. There is enough of telligence and virtue, and of honest purpose in the nation, if embedied and made active, to free us from the prevailing corruptions of the day. And there is no agency more efficient to strengthen this state of the public mind, than our Sabbath schools. They are the nurseries of virtue. of an elevated patriotism and of religion. do not speak of a narrow or sectarian principle, which admits of no merit or virtue out of its own system; but of a principle which is as expansive, as benevolent, and as glorious as the doctrines of the Sa-

In conclusion, he writes, with as much eloquence as truth, as follows:

" If we desire to make our nation truly great, and to transmit to posterity our institutions in their primitive simplicity and force, we must imbue the minds of our youth with a pure and an elevated morali ty, which shall influence their whole live. And I know of no means so well calculated to produce this result, as Sabbath schools. Whether we look to the good of these schools are recommended by considerations of the deepest importance.

A NOBLE ACT.

Among the many examples of praiseworthy conduct which the late terrible conflagration developed, one instance of daring inrepidity and successful effort by a young man deserves particular mention. In the third story of a wooden building on Front street, Mr. George Miller was lying dangerously sick, attended by his wife and daughter. After the former had been removed, it was ascertained that Miss Milapprehensive of becoming better acquainted ler was yet in the building, the roof and sides of which were enveloped in flames. In the morning, Jack Ketch was found and her life imminently exposed. At this dangling by the neck, from a rope attached juncture a young man, about eighteen to the gratings of the prison. His fellow- years old, Mr. Mortimer Barnes, rushed

it. A facetious prisoner, however, alleged In endeavoring to rescue her she reso that the executioner had been seized with that the executioner had been seized with his profession, had resolved to retire from it by suicide.—
that her mother was yet in the building, 6 " German Bitters; 4 Eping, Sarsap and telligent Governor of the district, who went While fruitlessly expostulating with her, to work, in the old style of the inquisition, the flames had reached the staircase, and egress was barred up; but young Barnes, torture to the prisoners. In the process of nothing daunted, finding that she would his ingenious devices for the elucidation of not accompany him, gallantly seized and bore her down stairs through the flames, and placed her in the care of her friends. In this daring and heroic exploit he was bably burnt, as was also the young lady; sired information, although when taken but her life was saved, and he, at the imminent hazard of his own life, was her preserver. Young Barnes is now confined to his room, and, though suffering greatly especial officer to ascertain the facts in this from the effects of the fire, is in a fair way complicated tragedy. Our correspondent of recovery. The young lady has also suffered greatly, but is now doing well. Such instances of devoted heroism are rare in-

MELANCHOLY. - A gentleman who, a few weeks ago, visited Gravois, a small town some ten miles south-west of St. Louis, found there no less than twenty-five infant boys and girls whose parents had died of the cholera. They were all gathered into the dwelling of a benevolent gentleman, named Sappington, by whom they were gerously cared for.
