White Group Admits Blacks

Two local black secretaries were inducted into the previously all-white Winston-Salem chapter of the National Secretaries Association this summer.

Mrs. Shirley O. Barnes and Mrs. Parthenia Galloway were inducted into the organization in June.

Mrs. Barnes, a Forsyth Technical Institute graduate, said in a recent interview that she became interested in the group after having attended several of the secretaries work-shops. "I inquired about the association and learned that there were no black members," she recalled.

In addition, Mrs. Barnes said she was told that several black secretaries had asked for applications some time ago, but none returned the applications with the required fees. "The association indicated to me, she said, "that they wanted black members. But, concluded that because those secretaries did not respond, they were not interested in joining."

Mrs. Barnes, executive secretary to Mrs. Louise G. Wilson of the Experiment in Self-Reliance, Inc., asked Mrs. Galloway if she wanted to join with her in seeking acceptance in the association.

Both Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Galloway were invited to attend a meeting of the association where they were introduced to members and observed the proceedings. A month later they were notified by Mrs. Margaret Thompson that their applications had been approved by the international office.

Mrs. Barnes believes that the acceptance is an example of the philosophy set forth in the code of ethics:

"Recognizing the secretary's position of trust, we resolve in all of our activities to be guided by the highest ideals for which The National Secretaries Association stands: to establish, practice, and promote professional standards; and to be ethical and understanding in all of our business endeavors."

Roosters Crow Could Lead To Prosecution

You don't have to beat your neighbor on the head these days to be prosecuted. You can be prosecuted if your rooster crows constitute a noise to him and probably keeps his family awake.

According to a Winston-Salem police report, Betty Ann Maurer of 701 Elderwood Dr. reported on Sept. 3 between 12:30 and five in the morning someone is allowing his rooster to crow.

Betty said that this noise is keeping her family awake. In their investigation, Winston-Salem police found that four roosters belonging to Roger Powers of 660 Vedo Dr. were responsible for the noise. The investigating officer told Mr. Powers that he could be prosecuted if the noise continued.

Institute Opens Winston-Salem Chapter

A Phillip Randolph Institute has opened a chapter here in Winston-Salem. The offices of the Institute are located at 2208 Patterson Avenue. Local officers are Avery Flynt, president, Clara Tatum secretary and Boyd L. Archie, treasurer.

The objective of the Winston-Salem chapter is to play a key and unique role in educating and training minorities to participate fully in the American political process through voter education, voter registration and get out the vote drives.

A Philip Randolph, founder of the A. Phillip Randolph institute is a black Civil Rights leader, who envisioned participation by all people in the democratic political process, as the only effective way to bring about political, social and economic change. It was also his desire to start with minorities because he believes that here is where a great deal of work needs to be done in convincing them that the political arena not only affects their survival but also the survival of our nation.

He also believes that local chapters through cooperation with business, labor and the civic group can accomplish this job.

Since its beginning, the Institute has grown from a handful to more than 140 chapters across the nation with headquarters in New York City.

National officers are A. Phillip Randolph, president, Bayard Rustin, Executive Director and Norman Hill, Associate Director.

Davis New Principal

Winston-Salem native, Troy L. Davis of 3330 Cumberland Road, is the new Principal of Oak Hill School in High Point, N.C.

A Winston-Salem native, Troy L. Davis is the new principal of Oak Hill School in High Point, N.C. In his college years at Winston-Salem State University, Davis played football and was well known here in Winston-Salem.

Davis attended Winston-Salem State on full Athletic Scholarship.

"For the two weeks I have been in my new post," Davis told Winston-Salem Chronicle, "I have enjoyed my job."

Davis was assistant principal of Mebane School and has been
