VET SCHOOL STUDIED

Officials at A&T State University in Greensboro is still seeking the location of the proposed school of veterinary medicine on the A&T campus.

The siting of the school of veterinary medicine is looked upon by many as an open test of how integration is working in the area of higher education in the state universities and colleges.

Winston-Salem State University (WSSU) president, Dr. Kenneth R. Williams, is one of the many black educators who would like to see the school at A&T rather than N.C. State University (predominantly white) in Raleigh.

In a recent telephone conversation Dr. Williams cited several reasons why he would like to see the veterinary school at A&T:

"At present we don't have a large group of black veterinarians. If the program were at A&T, in my opinion, it would automatically attract A&T graduates and young black men."

In addition, he said, "It would be in keeping with the program announced by the state of putting programs in institutions without regard to race. The equalization of A&T and N.C. State would take great step forward and would have a positive effect on the integration of A&T."

The number of black veterinarians is small to begin with and there is no such school in the state. N.C. State does have some related courses and many people feel that that is a consideration in locating the school there. But many feel that if that is a reason for locating the school there it is not a good one.

The major concern seems to be the effect that locating the school at A&T will have on the black community. Dr. Williams explained the effect he believed it would have:

"It would mean that the whole process of equalizing the institutions has begun.

Burger King Holds Grand Opening Ceremony

Even though the weather was 33 degrees on Friday, Nov. 15, many well-wishers attended the Grand Opening Ceremony of the new Burger King.

Bill McGee, Franchise owner, was full of smiles as he saw a dream come true. Even though it took two years for the dream to become a reality as he did not become discouraged. If courage and determination are the ingredients for a successful businessman, then McGee is on his way.

The gathering of men and women from around the community included various minority businessmen. Music was supplied by the WSSU Band. The new Burger King is located on the corner of 5th and Claremont.

So have it your way Bill McGee!

Fashion Show Donates Proceeds To Charities

The fashion show which was held at Benton Convention Center, on November 17, 1974, coordinated by Carolyn Bigby, was well admired and enjoyed by many. The proceeds from the show went to the Sickle Cell Foundation and the March of Dimes.

The fashions were shown not only in groups of one's but with as many as three to five on the stage at once; giving a general look of a career girl fashions, lounge, and formal wear. The men exhibited looks from the weekend casual wear to the week-day office attire.

Ms. Bigby stated that "The objective of the show was to make people aware of their beauty potential. How high is your's actually? If what you're wearing isn't giving you any kind of emotional lift when you put it on, take it off.

The Fashions were from Monique's and modeled by Delores Homan, Christa White, Andrea Brandon, Crista Douthit, Clarise Smith, Heidi Smith, Hortense Dunlap, Wanda Brown, Judy Easter, Inaze Wall, Joyce Bigby, Derry Bigby, Leon Kay, Page Mitchell, and Albert Brown. The commentator was Elaine Graves. and music was by The Opus 7.

City Has Rash Of Break-ins

Winston-Salem has been experiencing a rash of store break-ins and robberies lately. It is believed that increased unemployment, high prices and general depressive feelings are the reasons.

Many officials believe that if conditions continue to worsen the crime rate will increase accordingly.

Robbers, apparently feeling the pinch of inflation, entered an A&P store Nov. 16 and walked off with a basketful of groceries.

Police reports indicate that sometime during the night of Nov. 15-16 someone broke into the A&P store on S. Main Street. The suspects went to the rear of the store and emptied some cartons in the loading area and used the cartons to carry off the following items:

242 cartons of cigarettes, four Jane Parker fruit cakes, two cases of anti-freeze, 12 hams, steaks, picnic meat, sausage, franks, ground beef, pork and chickens.

The value of the haul was estimated at more than a thousand dollars. Police are continuing the investigation.

League Holds Meet

The Professional Business League held its regular monthly meeting on Saturday, Nov. 16 at 5 p.m. Hostesses for the meeting were Annie P. Wilson and Etta W. Carter.

The program committee, chaired by Jeanette Porter, invited Mrs. Virginia Newell, Professor of Mathematics at Winston-Salem State University and Salem College, as the guest speaker.

Mrs. Newell spoke on the topic of "Public Speaking". She also gave a brief motivating talk on blacks supporting black businesses.
