Home Is Split On Voting Issue

Dear Liz,

During election time it is hard for some people to choose the candidate they think is best. I am a Democrat and my husband is a Republican. A difference of opinion about the candidates is causing a problem at my house. He wants me to vote for his Republican candidate and I want him to vote for my Democratic candidate. We cannot agree, and now we are talking of getting a divorce because of this. Please help us.

Unhappy Voter

Dear Voter,

Don't discuss politics with your husband since it causes a problem. Go in the voting booth without your husband and vote for who you want. It is very unfair to the both of you to try and influence one another for your particular candidate. If you want to save your marriage, and voting for your husband's candidate will do this, lie and tell him you will, then vote for who you want to. This is what you would call a "good lie."

Dear Liz,

My desire is to be an actress. I auditioned for a small part in a movie the other day and got the part. After the audition the producer came to my dressing room and tried to make advances toward me. He said that if I wanted to make it big, I would have to be willing to do what I am told at any time. I am very disappointed in producers and acting. How can I change my attitude and still save my career?

The Actress

Dear Actress,

The movie industry is a business like other business. You have some rotten bosses in all kinds of work. You have to learn to deal with this kind of man. Strive for perfection in your career so you can call the shots. Let the producer know you are not for any hanky-panky if it means giving up the part. His advances probably are made on all new members of his cast. He wants to see how far he can go with you and he'll go as far as you let him.

Chronicle Profile

The Senior, Senior Citizen

by Rudy Anderson
Staff Writer

Mrs. Maggie B. Biggers, of 2202 N. Trade in Winston-Salem, at age 80 is the senior, senior citizen of the Happy Kimberly Park Senior Citizens Club.

She said that this was her first year in the organization although she had been a member of various other senior citizens groups. Mrs. Biggers was born in Forsyth County, "the country" she laughs, in 1896. She had only one child, a daughter, who died in 1973 at the age of 61.

From the one daughter, Mrs. Biggers got four grandchildren. They in turn gave her six great-grandchildren who gave her four more great-great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Biggers says she has lived in Winston-Salem most of her life. In that time she has seen many changes take place in the city most of us (younger folks) take for granted. "Did you know," she says, "that where the Reynolds Building is now standing, that used to be the City Market." "Yes, the city has truly grown. I can remember when there weren't any projects," she said. "I believe Happy Hill was the first project and then came these here at Kimberly," she said. She said she had lived on Oak Street before the city built the project.

Mrs. Biggers was also a Reynolds employee for over 30 years. "32 years and six months," she said with a smile. She said she was a receiving machine operator.

Mrs. Biggers has an equally long history with the church having been a member of Union Baptist Church for the last 41 years. She is a member of the church's usher board and was also elected mother of that organization. She has also served on the church's F and Aid Club, an organization that she says has helped others in times of financial stress.

She appears to be an energetic woman who seems happy with her life. Why not be, as she put it, "I am the only one of my mother's ten children still alive."

She said she hopes she'll be around to celebrate her 100th birthday. Mrs. Biggers looks like a lady who is living right so who knows, she just may outlive us all. By the way, she made some apple pie that was just out of this world.
