Keep up with Black America on "Black Journal"

Starting (Feb. 7 11:00 p.m. T.V. 26) see the leading weekly series which gets you involved with the events, issues, movements and personalities that influence the Black presence in America. Hosted by Tony Brown.

"The Search for Roots" "Roots is simply the story of all black people," says Alex Haley, author of the bestseller, Roots. A relationship between that concept and a practical how to go about your own genealogical search is explained.

"The New Power: The Black Vote" Jimmy Carter is the first President who has gone into the White House on the coattails of the black vote. As a result, will any blacks gain significant political power? Who? Will the black community be rewarded for its support?

"Benign Neglect" Discussion centers on how "benign neglect" as a social policy in urban areas has caught up with whites and how the black family managed to resist the pressures of slavery and racism, contrary to Moynihan's thesis.

"War in Africa?" Southern Africa - what's happened? Why? What does the future hold? Will the struggle for majority rule lead to war?

"The New Warrior: Can Benjamin Hooks Save the NAACP?" Is the NAACP out of touch with blacks? Can it survive? Is the civil-rights movement dead?

"Colored Girls or Black Women?" This week centers on man/woman relations and the negative image of black men as seen in the controversial Broadway hit "For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide..." The dynamics - sociological and economic - of this basic question which affects all black men and women is explored.

"Carter's First 90 Days" An examination and evaluation of President Jimmy Carter's first ninety days in office and its impact on black Americans.

"Does Busing Work?" Busing for integration has thrown the concept of quality education for blacks and whites out of focus. How do you evaluate its worth and effectiveness?

"Black vs. Black: the Dilemma of Black Colleges" An examination and analysis of the case of Andrews vs. Matthews or the NAACP Legal Defense Fund vs. Black College Presidents over desegregation.

"The Great Ladies" A historical and personal analysis of the lives of three great female singers (Billie Holiday, Josephine Baker and Lena Horne), reenacted musically by Carol Cass, a female singer and impressionist.

"Paul Robeson: Walking in the Sunlight or Shuffling in Darkness?" An intimate and unique view of a great man misunderstood and abused during his lifetime.

"Language in Black and White" How attitudes, nonverbal behavior and racial prejudices affect communications, interpersonal and interracial between blacks and whites. Linguistics experts will visually document a study prepared for the U.S. Army on this subject.

"What Happened to the Black Revolution?" The history of the 60's, its leadership and dynamics, and an analysis of a changed America and the evolving attitude of whites towards blacks and blacks towards themselves.

"What is a Black Leader?" How does one become a black leader? Who picks them? What do they do? Who are they?
