Two Rams Make All-CIAA

Don Helton

Carlos Terry and Don Helton have been selected as co-"Rams of the Week" by the Winston-Salem Chronicle after being named to the All-CIAA basketball team announced this week.

Both are repeaters from last years team.

Terry a 6-5 junior forward from Lexington is the CIAA's leading rebounder with a 14.7

per game average. He also ranks third in the conference in scoring averaging 23.1 points per game. He also leads the team with 53% field goal accuracy. Terry may have lost his chances for conference player-of-the-year when he was slowed by tonsillitis late in the season.

Helton a 6-1 senior guard from Charlotte is the Rams floor leader. He is the Rams second leading scorer and leads the team in assists and free throw accuracy.

Both players have received "Ram of the Week" honors before during the season. Terry has been picked twice before and Helton has been tabbed on one occasion.

Rams Weaken As Tourney Nears

The Winston Salem State Rams starting the week with hopes of overtaking CIAA southern division leader St. Augustine's had their division title hopes crushed by two straight losses.

The Rams without the services of All-CIAA pick Carlos Terry for 1 and one-half games lost consecutive games to the leagues two bottom teams. The losses the Rams second and third in a row dropped them to 9-6 in the CIAA and 14-8 overall.

On Thursday night February 10 the Rams journeyed to Salisbury to take on Livingstone College. The Bears sporting a 1-11 conference record and victims of a blowout at the hands of WSSU in Winston-Salem earlier in the season whipped the Rams 63-57.

WSSU playing without Terry who was in the infirmary with tonsillitis fell behind 30-20 late in the first half and trailed 36-27 at the half. They could get no closer in the final twenty minutes and trailed by as many as 14 at times. The 63-57 final margin was the closest the Rams came to making a game of it in the second half. Only two Rams were in double figures for the game. George Gibson led the team with 15 points and Don Helton added 10. Stenson Conley and Marco Dillard had eight points each.

On Saturday the Rams were again on the Road in Fayetteville. The Broncos of FSU who fell into the league cellar after Livingstones win with a 2-13 record took a 42-38 halftime lead as Carlos Terry sat on the bench.

In the final period Terry returned to the Ram lineup and pumped in 17 points but it was not enough as Fayetteville State took an 85-79 win.

The Rams shot 56% from the field and outrebounded the Broncos 43-37 with Stenson Conley hauling in a game high 16. FSU however, cashed in on 19 of 26 foul shots, while the Rams got only 13 chances making nine, to seal the win.

The Rams fell to 14-8 overall and now must capture the conference tourney to gain a post season berth.

The Rams now hold second position in the CIAA's southern division with one game remaining. A loss to Virginia State Friday night at the Coliseum coupled with a win by Johnson C. Smith in their final CIAA encounter could leave the two teams tied for second with identical 9-7 records. A coin flip would then decide the second place team for the tournament.

Women Tie For 1st

The Winston Salem State womens basketball squad earned a tie for first place in the CIAA's southern division with an 85-80 win over Shaw University Tuesday night.

The win, the teams seventh against three losses tied them with Shaw for the division lead.

Brenda Winfield led the victory with 28 points, Carla Kincaid added 20. Larice Jenkins and Almerie Mosely had 12 points each and Marcia McNair contributed 11 including two free throws late in the game. Karla Owens had 22 points for the Bears, Denise Craig 20 and Pat Funnie 18.

The womens CIAA tour-namment will be held February 17-18-19 in Norfolk Virginia.

The Rams received the top seed among southern division teams in the tourney by virtue of their two victories over Shaw during the regular season. They will take on St. Paul's (5-5) the northern divisions fourth place team at 7:00 Thursday February 17.

Northern division champion Norfolk State (10-0) goes against St. Augustine's (4-6). Shaw's (7-3) battles Virginia Union (7-3), and Virginia State (9-1) takes on Livingstone (5-5) in other first round pairings.
