Terry Suffers Hand Injury

Suffering from a hand injury that has caused him to alter his shot WSSU All-American Carlos Terry has dropped to third place in the CIAA scoring race. Through 10 games he is averaging 24.4 points per game. That average will fall even more after Monday night's four point performance against St. Paul's.

Fayetteville State's Edward Jefferson a 6-5 forward continues to lead the league with a 27.8 average followed by Johnson C. Smith's Herbert Entzinger with a 25.4 average. With Terry hurt sophomore Reggie Gaines has increased his scoring and now stands fifth in the scoring race with an 18.8 average just behind Hampton's 6-8 Reggie Mahorn. He has a 21.4 average. Elizabeth City's Tom Blue leads the conference in rebounding with a 16.6 per game average. Hampton's Keith Tolliver averages 13 rebounds a game and Terry ranks third in that department with 11.8 rebounds per contest. Sophomore Mike Robinson has grabbed 105 rebounds through 10 games and averages 10.5 each time out. WSSU ranks first in the league in team defense giving up only 66.3 points per game and is second to Virginia Union in field goal shooting hitting 51 per cent of their floor shots. Union has hit better than 53% from the field. The Rams also rank first in scoring margin. They have scored at a rate of 85.7 points per game and have a 19.4 scoring margin over their opponents.

Sparrow

Continued From Page 9 two free throws cut the margin to three, 59-56 with 2:05 remaining. Sparrow then scored the final two on a slam dunk with 39 seconds left to insure the Aggies win.

Sparrow is just now regaining the form that led the Aggies to the National Invitational Tournament in '75. He was forced to sit out last season with academic problems.

The win over South Carolina State put the Aggies in the MEAC early season lead.

Health Watch

The Danger Of Alcoholism

Alcoholism is an illness and it is one that affects a great number of people from all walks of life. It affects not only the alcoholic himself but also his family, friends, coworkers, and even strangers. Among other things, his drinking is responsible for disruption of his family life, his work, and, tragically, for a high number of fatal accidents on our nation's highways.

There is no way to accurately determine the number of alcoholics in North Carolina because many can easily hide their illness. At first, an alcoholic may brag about how much he can hold. Later, after he is hooked, he will play down his addiction and tell everyone how little he actually drinks.

In the beginning, excessive alcohol consumption may be a symptom of other problems that are bothering an individual. He uses alcohol as a means of self-medication to ease his tension and release him from his real problems. It is much cheaper to buy a fifth than to seek professional help and counseling for his problems.

While we tend to think of alcoholism as a disease that primarily affects men, women may have just as much trouble with alcoholism. However, women, more than men, are apt to be "closet drinkers," hiding their illness from family and friends. Hiding it until it reaches a point where it can be hidden no more.

Alcoholism is a devastating disease but there is hope for the person who is truly motivated. Professional counseling is available from many sources including private psychiatrists, Alcoholics Anonymous, and your local mental health department.

If you or someone you know is having a problem with drinking your physician or minister can put you in touch with an appropriate treatment program in your area. There are also programs that help other members of the family cope with an alcoholic member's problem.
