He explained that he had difficulty in getting a conference with the chancellor, and stated that when he did get to see him, it was not a private interview.

Ward also sent a telegram to UNC president William Friday asking that the chancellor's inauguration be postponed. During the inauguration week Dr. Covington received SBI protection.

In explaining the reasons for this protection, Covington told members of the press that Ward's letters contained threats, and informed them that Ward had a "criminal record." During a period of racial conflict Ward had held a gun on the president of the university where he was then employed.

Several days after the inauguration, Dr. Covington suspended Ward—the first step toward his dismissal—on the grounds of professional misconduct.
