Despite the bravery of blacks in the War, conditions in race relations changed little at home. While blacks in Europe received distinguished service crostroops in the states often faced hostility from white civilians. One such incident in Brownsville, Texas in 1917 ended in the death of 17 whites. Thirteen black soldiers of the 24 Infantry were hanged for murder and mutiny; 41 were imprisened for life, and 40 were held pending 'further investigation."
