Never Looked Back

It was in her junior year at Benedict College in Columbia, SC that Florence Moore was steered away from nursing into a life long career as a social worker, but Mrs. Moore has no regrets and has never looked back.

Mrs. Moore had intended to take nursing training although she hadn't really made up her mind. She hadn't considered social work and it wasn't until her dorm supervisor mentioned the idea did she consider it.

"She told me that I had a knack with people and I was a lover of people so I should be a social worker," Florence Moore said.

Since she did like people and liked working with people, after graduation from Benedict, Mrs. Moore attended Atlanta University School of Social Work.

After coming to Winston-Salem, Mrs. Moore began working as a case worker with the Department of Social Services, her present employer. As a case-worker she worked out into the community.

"We had an enormous case load," Mrs. Moore said. "I worked with families, the disabled and the old aged and I liked it."

"I worked as a case-worker for 12 years before my director saw fit to make me a supervisor," Mrs. Moore continued. "I liked the personal contact I had when I worked in the field, I wanted to be where the action was."

Mrs. Moore was made supervisor of adult services and in 1974 she was added additional responsibilities as volunteer coordinator for the Department of Social Services.

"To be a volunteer you have to be a special type of person, to be able to go in and do things for people for nothing," Mrs. Moore said.

Under Mrs. Moore's direction, the program began with about 30 volunteers and reached a peak of 76 before dwindling.

"With inflation and rising gasoline prices people began to cut back and most of our volunteers are on a fixed income," Mrs. Moore said.

She said if she had worked solely with the volunteer program, she would have been able to do it differently.

"I would have liked to have had the volunteer family concept where we would get entire families to volunteer, including the children," Mrs. Moore said. "Children should start early learning how to do for others because we are becoming such selfish people."

"With the family concept a family could adopt a person in a nursing home and each person in the family could be in-involved," Mrs. Moore continued. "The little child could then grow up learning how to share."

Mrs. Moore is also a volunteer and has been for 29 years. She works with an elderly blind person.

"I love old people and I love to work with old people," said Mrs. Moore. "We just need more volunteers, more people to help people."

"Volunteering makes the difference because the volunteer may be the only light that person has in his life."

NEWS for Senior Citizens

With more than ten percent of the population over 55, a growing number of people have a potentially serious problem.

Senior citizens can protect their health by seeing their doctors.

Many older people have poor eating habits. Often they are on various drugs. Mature Americans are frequently inactive and debilitated. All these things can lead to constipation and that can put a strain on already delicate heart and blood vessels.

problems arise. Many medical experts suggest gentle, predictable and easy-to-take laxatives such as Senokot Tablets or Granules. Taken at bedtime, this natural vegetable laxative can usually induce comfort in the morning.

When a person feels better, he or she can often do more, and that can help prevent the problem from recurring.
