

Car Rental

A rental car, waiting when and where we want it, can add both pleasure and convenience to vacation trips. But learning how to rent the right car at the best price can be confusing. The Better Business Bureau has some basic guidelines to help costwise consumers get the best value for their car-rental dollar.

How To Rent

It pays to plan ahead both in terms of travel needs and the range of available cars and prices. Travel agents, airlines, and hotel reservation services can be a helpful source of car rental information and offer a wide choice of cars and prices, as well as convenient pick-up locations. Smaller local rental companies may offer lower prices, but also may have a more limited choice of cars and rates or a smaller service area. Keep in mind that false economy can spoil a pleasure trip, so get reliable recommendations before dealing with unknown companies.

Which Car To Rent

Decide what type of car will best suit travel plans. Rates can vary widely between standard sized, fully equipped cars and compact or sub compacts with basic equipment. Vacationers using a car for short trips to the beach probably won't need more than plain transportation, while a family traveling a long distance in hot weather may consider the cost of an air conditioned sedan a worthwhile expense.

What Does It Cost

Car rental costs vary widely. They can be based on the size and equipment of the car, a twelve or twenty-four hour day, planning can save money and vacation time. Decide the size of car and the dates it will be needed. Estimate the miles the car will be driven. Then compare rates and "plans" offered by several companies for the kind of car you want. Read all rate information carefully. Remember that, where high mileage is involved, it generally pays to rent the car with the most "free" mileage or lowest per mile rate. Be sure to reserve the car in advance and confirm the reservation.

Consumer Tips

Insurance

Car rental companies usually offer insurance as part of the rental contract, but find out exactly what and to what limits both the company and you are liable for in case of accident, injury, or theft. Also, find out about additional coverage from the company and what the added cost provides in terms of protection.

Inspection

The Better Business Bureau advises consumers that they should check any rental car before driving off the lot. If there is damage or missing equipment, inside or out, have the attendant note it on the contract. Check tires, brakes, lights, and all controls to be sure the car is ready for the road. Then, relax and enjoy the trip.

An Energy Tip From The Better Business Bureau: There is not a device currently on the market that will increase gas mileage. If you buy one of these so-called gas saving gadgets, at best you will lose the money you paid for the device.
