The descendants of the Salley and Mack Family of Orangeburg, S.C. met in Winston-Salem Friday and Saturday at the Holiday Inn North for their sixth annual family reunion.

The celebration began Friday evening with a cook out and picnic at the home of Dorothy Brown, the daughter of the oldest living member of the Mack Family, Rev. John W. Mack.

The occasion continued Saturday with breakfast and a luncheon program at the Hotel. Mrs. Brown was the guest speaker at the luncheon.

In addition to Rev. John Mack, pastor emeritus of Specer Memorial Church, Luella Sally Mack and Marion Salley, Sr. are the oldest living relatives of the two families. They are grandchildren of former slaves and the children of share-croppers.

Mrs. Luella S. Mack read the history of the family at the luncheon. Rev. Mack gave the invocation. Debra Hoy gave the highlights of the family and Mary Salley introduced the speaker.

The theme for the reunion was "Love is an everyday thing" and was stressed by the speaker Mrs. Brown.

"Everyday love is not possessive," Mrs. Brown said. "It is free so we can be whoever and whatever we are."

She told the group that they must have God in their lives and that God makes it possible "the manner in which we treat others."

Mrs. Brown also stressed the importance of the family. She said that the entire human relationship is built around the family circle.

"Unity, progress and love we must pass on till all of become as one," she stated. "Whether together or whether apart, our family name we'll keep to heart."

Mrs. Brown was also chairman of the Winston-Salem planning committee for the family reunion.

Others on the committee were Luella Mack, John W. Mack, Maggie Haile and Theodore Mack.

WSSU Seniors Feted

Winston-Salem State University held a senior recognition luncheon last week for the 30 seniors who completed their requirements for graduation during the summer session.

They heard a commencement speech of sorts from state Rep. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, who noted that he had taken courses at WSSU. "Everywhere I go, I try to tell people that," said the legislator.

Kaplan said he would support continuing improvements to the university so that it would become the best university in Winston-Salem and one of the best in the state.

After the luncheon, participants viewed dancers, singers and a flutist from the Junior Arts Program jointly sponsored by Experiment in Self-Reliance and WSSU.

Dr. Arnold Lockett, a new vice-chancellor for academic affairs, presented the graduates, who are:
