

Dear Editor:
There is a great need for more black sports-writers in this country. There were several events that happened in the last couple of weeks to really vindicate this.

In baseball, for example, the sportswriters almost ignored Lou Brock when he got his 3,000th hit, but they played up Carl Yastrzemski's. How many people, especially Blacks, know that Brock broke Ty Cobb's base stealing record (892 stolen bases) in 1977, very few I would imagine.

As far as I am concerned, Lou Brock is one of the greatest baseball players to have played the game.

Turning to football, Game Plan Magazine, one of the top college football magazines in the country didn't report on some Black football conferences, not even the conference of the National Champion (Division 1-AA) Florida A&M.

And to add insult to injury, Sports Illustrated picked Nevada-Reno over such National football powers like Jackson State, Grambling, and Florida A&M. As of last week, they were running 1, 2, & 3 in the NCAA Division 1-AA football poll.

The feats that WSSU's head football coach Bill Hayes has accomplished (going 11-0 in 1977 & 1978, 22 straight regular season games, 19 straight CIAA conference games, going to the semi-finals in Division II of the NCAA Playoffs in his first try), to a certain degree has gone unrecognized by the Journal and Sentinel.

increasing longing on the part of the visitor to have a son by so learned a man. So before she departed she and Solomon had become lovers. She must have been very young, 18 or 20 years old.

All of this happened 3,000 years ago, yet the legend of Sheba and Solomon remains. The son born of their union is now part of history. But the tale is nowhere more potent than in Ethiopia where the royal dynasty when it was in power boasted a descent from the great king and his Yemini concubine.

Anyone that knows anything about football knows these are amazing accomplishments.

After Wake Forest beat Georgia, they got more local newspaper coverage than WSSU got when they went to the playoffs last year. I am not taking anything away from Wake Forest; it was a great win

Meanwhile, factory working conditions continue to cry out for improvement, particularly the reduction of heavy labor, noise, and the provision of amenities. "Flexitime," by which workers are allowed to arrange their own schedules within certain limits, has enjoyed success in a number of U.S. and European plants and offices, measured in part by a reduction in absenteeism.

"Job enrichment," aimed at combatting "anomie" the boredom of repetitive work—has also had some success, though in its more radical forms, such as non-assembly-line production of automobiles in Italy and Sweden, the outcome is not yet clear. Essentially the recent experiments have been attempts to exploit the principles discovered by Elton Mayo by providing greater scope for personal achievement and recognition for the workers.

In recent decades as in times past, however, such conscious efforts have been less significant in altering the worker's relation to work than the large-scale and usually unpredictable changes imposed by the general direction of technology and economics. These include the shift toward the service industries and high-technology clerical jobs, and from fabrication to processing industries, such as chemicals, plastics, and synthetics, in which automation flourishes.

These changes and the rapid strides made by industrial robots, which perform mechanically some of the functions previously performed by humans, give cause for hope that in the not-too-distant future physical drudgery and anomie may both be eliminated.
