

naomi's view

Sometimes it is a good idea to be different. When everybody thinks alike, nobody thinks at all. It appears that one of the dangers today is the constant attempt to run people through a mold. When that attempt becomes successful, you have the totalitarian state.

In such a situation, people think alike because they are forced to do so. We know no two people are alike physically, and certainly they are not alike in their capacity to achieve.

There is such a thing as diversity in unity. We can be united in great causes, and at the same time we can make our contribution in our own individual way.

There are pressures all around us to conform. We cannot perhaps get away from those pressures when it comes to material things, but our thinking and different actions for improvement is valuable.

Naomi C. McLean

Ideas constantly pass from person to person. The form of the idea constantly changes. It is true that we live in an era of unprecedented change. Progress is the outcome of ideas, and thinking differently. The value of each person, and all the action that flows differently proves in most cases to be valuable.

NASA Seeks Astronauts

HOUSTON--The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is now recruiting astronaut candidates for the Space Shuttle Program and qualified minorities and females are encouraged to apply. Acceptance of applications will end Dec. 1.

During the last recruiting program 1976-77, over 8,000 applications were received.

Six women and three blacks were accepted in the last group selected as astronaut candidates.

Joseph D. Atkinson, Jr., chief of the Equal Opportunity Programs Office at the NASA Johnson Space Center said, "We know there are many qualified minorities who are hesitant to apply for one reason or another. I would like to personally encourage those persons to write or call NASA for an application."

Applications may be requested by writing to the Astronaut Candidate Program, Code AHX, NASA Johnson Space Center, Houston, Tex. 77058, by calling (713) 483-5907.

Disabled

eligible to collect unemployment compensation.

Mrs. Louise Wilson, director of ESR, told the Chronicle that she made up a job for Ms. Campbell so that she could work.

"Some days she didn't feel like she could work," Mrs. Wilson said. "I made up a job for her as a librarian, but when they cut our funds, we couldn't keep her."

Mrs. Wilson said that she has tried to help Ms. Campbell get disability and has been to just about everybody seeking help for her.

In September Ms. Campbell wrote to Governor James Hunt for assistance in getting some financial support. Her letter was later turned over to Ward at the Department of Human Resources. Although Ward could not be reached by the Chronicle, in a letter addressed to Ms. Campbell, dated Sept. 24 he stated that because she met the requirements to receive Medicaid she is eligible for benefits under the Supplemental Security Income Program.

Ms. Campbell also receives a monthly food stamp allotment of $61. The Social Security Administration told her in letter that her condition did not affect her ability to work.

A spokesperson for the SSA declined to comment on the case because Ms. Campbell has file for a reconsideration of their decision. Ms. Campbell said she did file for reconsideration but has not heard anything from SSA.

She said she has received some financial help from Goodwill and that Social Services had given her emergency funds, but it was only enough to last two months. She said she has received assistance from various churches in the city.

"I'm not asking for a handout, because I've tried to work and if I could I would work," Mrs. Campbell said.

"Although I've never considered myself disabled, I feel like I'm disabled. I hurt and I need some financial assistance.

grants" because it is a development area.

He said that he will begin learning the total operation of human services and how the programs are carried out. He sees no problem in making the transition to that department.

As director of human services, Farabee will perform professional and administrative work in the implementation and development of the CETA program.

"Once you learn the operations of local governments, the federal government's attitude, how fundings come about on the local level the other part is not as difficult," Farabee said.

He has a M.S. degree in administration from A&T State University and a B.S. degree in chemistry from Hampton Institute.
