up information so that people could have voted more wisely."

The Rev. J. Ray Butler said that rumors that black ministers were the chief proponents of the straight 3-23 ticket just aren't true. Butler is president of the Baptist Ministers Conference and Associates and is pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church.

"The BMCA did endorse Democrats on the national, state and local ticket. We didn't endorse the straight Democratic ticket," he said.

Butler said that the ministers felt that personalities who best fit the offices, candidates who advocated human relations and humanity were his group's choice.

"We (the ministers) have been unfairly blamed. This is the biggest white backlash that I've heard or read out in history," Butler said.

The minister went on to say that "conservatism means to let things stay the way they are."

"This community can't thrive or for long exist in the attitudes of God on conservatism," he said.

Butler said that he was particularly "deeply depressed," that Sen. Robert Morgan was defeated.

"Sen. Morgan was defeated because of his nomination of Richard Erwin. I feel the same way about Congressman L. Richardson Preyer of Greensboro. They were two good and liberal men, who were defeated for doing the right thing."

High Lawyer Fees Revealed in Survey

The Wake Forest chapter of the North Carolina Public Interest Research Group (NC PIRG) this week released a study of lawyers' fees in Winston-Salem. The study, "Getting a Good Day in Court: A Study of Lawyer's Fees in Winston-Salem" reports on the results of a telephone survey of 12 lawyers on their fees for simple legal procedures. The study found: (1) lawyers surveyed reported fees that vary considerably. The charge for an uncontested divorce ranged from $80 to $200 and the fee to prepare a simple will ranged from $25 to $75.

(2) The average prices for the legal procedures chosen were higher than in neighboring Guilford and Alamance County where advertising by lawyers is considerably more common.

Mike Laffon, author of the report, said "We chose to survey Winston-Salem lawyers because of the notable infrequency of advertising. We found both higher average prices and a greater variation of prices than those found in a similar study in Guilford/Alamance County. It seems reasonable to conclude that lawyers' advertising produces lower and more uniform fees."

The telephone survey was carried out last spring by eight members of NC PIRG. Several lawyers were also questioned as to their decision not to advertise. One of the 12 lawyers was dropped from the survey because he would not quote any fees over the phone.

"Our intent in preparing this report is to show variation in prices, and to point out the problems that result because our local attorneys choose not to advertise their fees. The report is not meant as a guide to local lawyers," Laffon explained.

The Wake Forest Public Interest Research Group is one of seven chapters of NC PIRG* a statewide student based consumer and environmental organization. The report is available through the Durham PIRG office for a 75 cents charge to cover postage and printing. The office address is Box 2901, Durham, NC 27705.

Results of the survey will be given next week.

Local 4H's Attend Annual Convention

Some 300 adults from across North Carolina gathered in Raleigh November 1-2 for a Volunteer 4-H Leader Convention last week.

The highlight of the convention came Sunday morning with the ratification of a new constitution and the election of officers for a North Carolina Volunteer 4-H Leaders' Association.

The convention theme was "Sharing the Lead" and during the meeting the 4-H leaders discussed their particular involvement in county or district programs. Other convention features included as idea fare, seminars, workshops, exhibits and a pig picking.

Held at the McKimmon Center on the North Carolina State University Campus, the convention was planned and conducted by volunteer 4-H leaders who represented all seven districts of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

The Extension Service conducts the 4-H program for more than 110,000 Tar Heel youngsters through county offices and with the assistance of some 15,500 volunteer leaders.

Attending the convention from Forsyth County were Karen Simmons, Marshall T. Boulware, Jr., Bob Smith, Betty Smith, Jackie Smith, Roy Smith, Octa Smith, Rick Cain, and Roy Musten.

Presenting workshops were Karen Simmons and Marshall Boulware, Jr., in Eye Care; Bob Smith, Middle Management in Horse Program; Octa Smith, Crafts; and Rick Cain, Public Speaking.

Cavanaugh Announces Ward Meeting

Residents of the Southwest Ward will have an opportunity to meet with Alderman and State Senator elect John J. Cavanaugh Jr., at the regular monthly "Speak Out" meeting on Nov. 18, 7:30 p.m., at the First Christian Church, 2320 Country Club Road.

W. T. Shore of the city's community Development Department will be the special guest. Shore will answer questions on the city's program for the handicapped.

"This is a great time for people in the Southwest Ward to voice their opinions or concerns on city government and the Southwest Ward," Cavanaugh said. "The field of discussion is wide open and in no way restricted to community development matters."

This is the last meeting until after the holiday season. The monthly meetings will resume Jan. 20 at Moore Elementary School.

the 5 1/4% checking

There's a new kind of checking account headed your way this January. We call it NOW 5 1/4% Checking. It works just like a personal checking account... except it pays 5 1/4% interest like a Regular Savings account. That's the highest rate allowed by law for any bank or savings institution.

If a NOW account does not suit your needs, there's an alternative... SaveNcheck. Six years ago in anticipation of NOW accounts, Forsyth Bank was the first bank in North Carolina to offer SaveNcheck. This convenient service allows you to make free telephone transfers from savings to checking. It gives you an opportunity to put idle money to work until you need it.

Compare SaveNcheck and the new NOW account and decide which offers the best way to make your money work for you.
