

Dr. C.B. Hauser

Hauser Honored

Dr. Charles B. Hauser is Forsyth County's Mental Health Association, Santa to many, Volunteer-of-the-month.

This was the second year that Dr. Hauser has helped the Mental Health Association with the Operation Santa Claus party at the Reynolds Health Center, which has now become an annual event.

Dr. Hauser, as co-chairman of Operation Santa Claus, always does more than his share. This year and last year he volunteered to assist Highland Presbyterian Church with collections. Dr. Hauser said this year they filled five boxes full of every item imaginable: socks, handkerchiefs, gowns, cigarettes, perfume and toys just to name a few.

"I like to work with Operation Santa Claus because I like helping others," says Dr. Hauser, adding, "I feel that if all of us made a contribution it would be a better world for all of us."

Dr. Hauser is a retired professor of education at Winston-Salem State University. He has served on the Mental Health Association Board for six years. He has also been chairman of the Nominating Committee which appoints directors and officers of the Mental Health Association. He has participated in the Mental Health Association Phone-A-Thon, which works to renew and take in new memberships to the Mental Health Association.

He has served on the REACH committee, an advisory board that helps people who have mentally ill persons in their families to get together and support each other. He also serves at the liason with Forsyth/Stokes Area Mental Health Board.

East Ward Alderman Virginia K. Newell, in whose ward the proposed shopping center would be located told the Chronicle that she too is interested in getting a shopping center in East Winston.

"We need that shopping center and we're going to develop that shopping center. The main thrust is the shopping center," said Mrs. Newell who added, "I want blacks to be the developers, but envy and jealousy keeps blacks from coming together in a business venture."

Mrs. Newell said that she received a proposal from EWLDC on Jan. 5, but that it was incomplete.

"They (EWLDC) held all these secret meetings and they didn't tell me anything. When the whole idea of economic development came out, it was because of Virginia Newell. I also proposed black developers for the area before the black group expressed interest," she said.

Mrs. Newell, who met Mark Vieno, the developer from Minneapolis said that she was confident that Vieno would work with the black developers. Vieno was unavailable for comment.

"I definitely feel that the white developer wants the black group to come in and develop the shopping center, they could come in on different levels and at a percentage," she said.

Duncan disagreed and said that his group could develop the whole thing themselves without Vieno.

"I have a problem with the city and its sincerity toward black developers, especially when the developers are non-profit. I don't think it's too out of line for an honorable corporation to ask the city for its tax money back to invest again in the city for citizens' benefits," Duncan said.

Melvin White, city executive with Mechanics and Farmers Bank, which will be located on the same tract of land as the proposed shopping center said that the key was community ownership and community control of the shopping center.

"Our interest is strictly one of business. The bank would have a prime opportunity to get accounts and business from the shopping center," said White, adding, "If the center is built, then the surrounding area should come up a couple of notches economically," he said.

He also said that the business activity generated by the shopping center would benefit both Mechanics and Farmers and the new East Winston branch of Wachovia Bank, now under construction.

Valerie Broadie, the city's economic development officer said that Vieno was in Winston-Salem last week just to check the area out. "They are going to do preliminary studies to see if the project is feasible, nothing has really been decided yet," she said.

record. "We have, however, had problems with our mail. Mail that was supposedly sent out in September was still in the box at Reynolda station in October. "In the future we will either hand deliver our tax listing or send a self-addressed stamped envelope," said Holder.

Other persons who had late file penalties against them compromised were LeRoy Darby-$8, Peter J. Hurkie-$11.25 and John M. Martin-$13.81. The board voted unanimously to approve the zoning petition of Lelia Sheets, William Heirs, William T. Rothrock and Glenda S. Rothrick involving property in the southeast corner of US 421 and Lewisville-Clemmons Road. A unanimous vote was given to approve the adoption of the final assessment resolution ordering the making of certain local improvements to Ridgemoor Drive and the appropriation of non-tax funds in the amount of $7,380 and $4,680. A resolution to approve refunds in the amount of $589.04 by the tax supervisor and the appropriation of $200 from fund balance and $400 from excess revenue was approved unanimously by the Commissioners. The Commissioners tabled a resolution awarding a contract for a $20,000 playground complex until the next meeting.

Kitchen Delayed

Plans to open the Crisis Control Ministries, Inc., soup kitchen are at a standstill because a site for the project has not been found.

Rev. Michael Bradshaw, Assistant Director at Crisis Control said that the site the ministry had hoped to purchase for the soup kitchen is still unavailable. Bradshaw added that there was a problem with some of the family members not okaying the sale.

"We have plenty of volunteers. Money donations have been very good and we've gotten about all of the necessary equipment. We just don't have any place to house the kitchen," he said, adding, "I think we were a bit too self-confident and placed all our chickens in one basket. We have decided to look at other possibilities."

The Winston-Salem Foundation holds the deed to the facility and holds the immediate fate of the agency in its hands.

"It's up to them, but we wish that they wouldn't give in to Reynolds until we can definitely get going on our new building," the source said.
