Season Bright for FSU

Fayetteville--Basketball at Fayetteville State University has gotten off with a bang as the varsity men and women's squads continue their winning ways.

Second-year coach Jake Ford's Bronco-men have knocked off two of three CIAA foes starting the "second half" of the torrid CIAA race with triumphs over North Carolina Central (62-61) and Virginia State (69-67) while dropping a '95-84 road trip to Winston-Salem State.

The Lady Broncos, coached by first-year mentor Yvonne Edwards, is currently in second place in the CIAA Southern Division with a 6-1 league mark and 12-1 overall.

Senior Tri-Captain Steve Mims, a CIAA candidate, is leading the Bronco-men in scoring with a 16.2 clip. The Fayetteville native poured in 31 swishers in a losing cause against Winston-Salem; dumped in 26 more in a victory over North Carolina Central; and pumped in 28 points against league-foe Virginia State.

Sophomore guard Concehia Smith leads the team of the Lady Bronco in scoring with a 16.2 average and Dianthia Morris, a junior guard, is second with a 15.2 scoring average.

The Yvonne Edwards-coached squad has mowed down two straight opponents since the holiday break with wins over Shaw University (80-48) and a 58-56 non-conference victory over North Carolina A&T.

Archer Retains League Lead

By Robert Eller
Sports Editor

Waldo Hauser, the league's leading scorer, pumped in 28 points to lead six players in double figures as the Archer Stars topped the Lakers in a battle of unbeaten last week. The win gave Archer sole possession of first place in the Reynolds Basketball league at the Patterson Avenue YMCA.

Both teams entered the contest with 3-0 records in league play. Archer took control of the game from the outset and never trailed, as they scored the first two baskets. A jumper by the Lakers' Willie Johnson, who led all scorers with 29 points, brought the losers to within one, 9-8, eight minutes into the contest, but the quicker Archer team methodically pulled away after that.

Charles Searcy, who scored 10 points and led the rebounding effort of the winners with 13, hit both ends of a one-and-one with 6:41 left to give the Stars a 28-16 cushion. They pushed that mark to a 46-32 lead by intermission.

In the second half Archer continued gradually to increase their lead behind strong outside shooting.

Art Blevins' first basket of the contest upped the lead to 20 points (62-42) with just over 10 minutes remaining. The Lakers could cut but two points from that lead in the last 10 minutes of the 97.79 loss.

High jumping Mike Smith joined Williams as the top offensive threats for the Lakers who fell to 3-1 in the league. Smith hit for 27 points, 16 in the final half and hauled in 23 rebounds.

With seven weeks remaining in the 10 week season the Bruins and Supersonics are tied for third place with 2-2 marks while High Voltage, upset winners over the Bruins last week, are 1-3 and the Bullets are 0-4.

Behind Hauser's 27.1 scoring average are Kenny Mitchell of the Bruins with a 25.1 average followed by Willie McDonald of the Supersonics with a 21 point per game average.

League play will continue at the Y, each Tuesday and Thursday morning at 9:15 with three games each day.

Spikers Net Win

The Patterson Ave. YM-CA Volleyball League saw the Spikers spike the Hornets 4-15, 15-10, and 15-6 in this week's action. Also, the ladies' team nipped the Cobras 15-5, 8-15 and 15-12.

The Stoppers forfeited to the Stingers and the Raiders forfeited to the Rams.

High scorer for the men was Darryl Cook with 17 points for the Spikers and high scorer for the ladies was Lois Young with 7 points for the Cobras.

In the words of Don Meredith, you can "turn out the lights, the party's over," after this Sunday afternoon. Yes, not since the early weeks of July has there been a weekend when an NFL game, whether exhibition, regular season, wild card, or playoff, has not been played.

Now it all boils down to two teams and 60 minutes in the New Orleans Superdome this Sunday. And while there may have been a small number of astute fans who gazed into the crystal ball and saw the Philadelphia Eagles reaching Super Bowl XV, very few if any, saw the black and silver of the Oakland Raiders across the line of scrimmage.

The Raiders, the most successful franchise in the league over the past decade, were given little chance of getting to the playoffs when helmets and pads were donned back in July.

In fact, the biggest story in Oakland was not that the Raiders had made a trade for the likes of Kenny King, but that they had gotten rid of "The Snake," quarterback, Ken Stabler, who had been at war with owner Al Davis for the past year. The man the Raiders had wanted and who was the key to the Stabler deal was Dan Pastorini. And while Stabler was costing Bum Phillips his job in Houston - after Phillips had given up two top draft choices to get Stabler's tight man Dave Casper - Pastorini was doing the best thing he could for the Raiders, getting his leg broken. Although none of the Oakland players would come right out and say it, many felt that had Pastorini not sustained the inquiry the Raiders would not be going to New Orleans this weekend.

The injury to Pastorini gave Jim Plunkett, the league's top draft choice in 1970, a chance to resurrect his nearly tragic career and the melting pot blooded signal caller took full advantage of the opportunity.

While Pastorini was healing and Stabler was going to Casper in every crucial situation and throwing more interceptions that anybody in the league, save Richard Todd of the Jets, because of it, Plunkett was using the big play to win for the Raiders.

King, meanwhile, the forgotten man in the deal, was having a super year. Had not an injury slowed him down he would have reached the 1,000 yard mark in his second season of pro ball after carrying the pigskin on but three occasions for the Oilers last year.

Yes, now that it has come down to but two teams after some seven months of football. Al Davis is sitting back smiling, Kenny King is ready to play for a Super Bowl ring, Plunkett has regained his confidence and saved his career, Phillips is hoping to land a job in New Orleans himself, Pastorini is still fighting with Houston reporters and Stabler is looking for someone to blame for his dismal performance this year.

Without Cliff Branch to blame for dropping passes it won't be as easy this time.

As for my pick in the Super Bowl, the feeling here is that it will be a tossup.

Oakland has a sound and experienced offensive line, and King is a definite threat. Plunkett, however, may find it hard to believe that Roynell Young is a rookie since he may need an extra second to find a receiver in Young's territory. The ability of Jerry Robinson to cover the short pass will also be a problem for the Oakland quarterback.

Ron Jaworski will likewise have trouble keeping Lester Hayes from stealing his passes and Ted Hendricks does a great impression of either a linebacker or tackle.

Harold Carmichael or Wilbert Montgomery will give the Eagles the title, however, in another typical low scoring defense dominated, conservatively played contest. And then the wait begins until next July.

Hampton Sports

Women Cagers

Despite the worst start in the team's history, the Lady Pirates have shown signs of coming together. The team defeated Virginia AIAW Division II champion Radford 72-69 in the team's first game and proceeded to drop 10 straight games.

The team is led by junior guard Gwen Jordan who is averaging 14.6 points per outing. Hampton claims the top rebounder in the VAIAW Division II in Toni Goodman, who has an 18.5 rebounding norm.

On January 22, the Lady Pirates host Virginia Union. The powerful Pantherettes romped over Hampton 84-54 early in the season. In all, Virginia Union has defeated Hampton nine of the 11 times the clubs have met (.818). The Pantherettes have beaten Hampton four straight times.

In a rematch on the 1980-81 lidlifter, Hampton travels to Radford to play the Lady Highlanders on January 23. The teams have only met twice, but Hampton has won both games (1,000). The preseason coaches' poll predicted Radford to repeat at Virginia AIAW Division II champions this year but the Lady Pirates derailed the team 72-69 on November 15.
