

Opera Amazes Students

"The Marriage of Figaro" was received with enthusiasm much to the surprise of many who previously thought they wouldn't enjoy opera. The fast paced comedy was sung in English by the National Opera Company of Raleigh, North Carolina. The company has been touring the junior high schools in the Winston-Salem/Forsyth County School System during the past few weeks. The performers, from different parts of the country, added their own spark to the character they were portraying. The appearance of the school chorus was another touch of spice for the students. They saw their school mates performing with the opera players. They were: Sherri Ford, Randy Reece, Robert Kelly, Michelle Brown, Brenda Shelton, Renee Norwood, Sharon Tarsand Morrison, Trisha Wells, and Karyn Williams.

The costuming, scenery, and voices were so outstanding that the students were held spellbound throughout, despite the fact that a school bell malfunctioned and rang continuously for sometime. This learning experience was highlighted by a series of activities and workshops - including a film of the life of Mozart and tapes and slides of segments of the opera. Performers participated in a residence program in which they covered the following topics with students: Make-up Workshop, Writing Character Sketches, Costuming, Discussing Mozart's Life and Works, and What It Takes to be a Singer. After the opera, Principal George Green said, "Our students are really first class. Everyone enjoyed the opera." Northwest would agree, "Opera is fun."

After the report, many of the members became interested in attending the convention.

Jackson Completes Training

By Yvonne Anderson Staff Writer

Lavoris Jackson, a native of Winston-Salem, was one of the first all women's unit to complete Individual Combat Training for the United States Marine Corp on Paris Island, South Carolina. Jackson, 18, and a graduate of Parkland High School, said, "I was kind of scared because we were handling M-16's and hand-grenades, but it wasn't as bad as I thought it would be." She said that she wants to travel as far and to as many places as she can while making a career in the Marine Corp. Jackson will be stationed at Camp LeJeune, N.C. and work in the motor transport unit. "I miss some of the friends I made in bootcamp, but it was all worth it," Jackson said. "Graduation was worth it, it was a great feeling."
