

CIAA "Athletic Director-Of-The-Year"

J.D. Marshall (right) of Fayetteville State University (with glasses), was honored "CIAA Athletic Director of the Year" at its annual spring CIAA conference meeting held recently in Fayetteville, North Carolina. Congratulating Mr. Marshall is William "Bill" Archie, Athletic Director at Norfolk State University, who was given the honor last year.

Gaines Signs 10 To Basketball Grants

What happens to the nations winningest active basketball coach when he suffers through only his second losing season in more than 35 years of coaching and fails to make the CIAA tourney field?

Well, if that coach is none other than the legendary "Bighouse" Gaines he hits the road to make sure it doesn't happen again.

That is just what Gaines did this year and this week he announced what may be his largest and best recruiting crop during his career at WSSU.

Gaines signed no less than 10 young men to letters of intent and says that he may pick up at least one more player who "may be better than anyone we have now."

Heading the list of players who will join the Rams squad next season is 6-4 forward Wayne (Sleepy) Lynch. A product of Hampton High in Hampton, Va., Lynch is an excellent shooter who handles the ball and drives well. He also likes contact according to Gaines and will go inside. "He is ready to play right now," says Gaines of the youngster who made a number of all-star teams in the Virginia area.

Two other Hampton High players also linked with the Rams. 6-2 William Anderson led the Hampton team in both assists and scoring and the coach feels he will be an excellent number two guard. Anderson is also no slouch in the classroom having an SAT Score of better than 900 and receiving RJ Reynolds Scholarship.

The third member of the Hampton connection is 6-7 Quincey Pair. Only 17, Pair has a strong upper body at 195 pounds and Gaines says he should develop into a fine big man.

Another highly sought after player who will attend WSSU is 6-2 guard Franklin Henderson. The West Charlotte product is considered by some as the best shooter to come out of the state this past season and should give the Rams immediate help at the guard spot.

Still another guard prospect is John Watkins. A 6-2 transfer from Anderson Junior College, Watkins is aggressive and has leadership qualities. He will be used as a point guard. The Landover, Maryland native was highly recruited as a high school standout at Dewal High in Landover.

In past seasons Gaines has always moaned about his not being able to come up with a big man. This year in addition to Pair, Gaines also came up with four other players who are 6-5 or better. Heading that list is 6-7 Douglas Hobson of Kennedy High in Wilkesboro, New Jersey. The 190 pound 18 year-old is both strong and aggressive and Gaines feels he will be the quickest to develop of his big recruits.

6-5, 190 pound Garry Dalton hails from Martinsville, Va. where he played for Martinsville High. Gaines says he will develop into a fine forward with time.

6-6, John Moorman comes from the basketball hotbed of Montclair, New Jersey and needs only to develop strength and consistency to be a fine CIAA player.

Gaines says that 6-6 Eugene Penick of Lynchburg, Va., could be the sleeper in his recruiting class. "He has the strength to play CIAA ball now," says the coach who also recruited his father some years back.

Marvin McKoy is the final recruit Gaines has signed. The coach says McKoy has been well coached and is quick strong and determined and uses both hands well.

"All of these kids have potential and all will get a chance to develop. In fact one of the big kids will probably have to play right away. None of them can turn a program around single handedly but this is a fine group of athletes."

Gaines stopped short of saying this was his best recruiting crop ever. "These kids don't have the experience that the group of Don Helton, Tom Paulin and Carlos Terry had. Helton and Paulin were experienced players and Terry had played a lot of ball too. But they are young and I am looking forward to working with them."

Gaines said he still has two fine big men on his list and hopes to land at least one of them.

Bailey Takes Over At FSU

Charles Bailey, an assistant to Bill Hayes at WSSU for the past five years will be named head coach at Fayetteville State University this week it was learned recently.

Bailey, a native of Winston-Salem, who began his football career under Hayes at Paisley, was influenced to attend North Carolina Central by Hayes who also played his college ball there.

Bailey was a star defensive player for the Eagles under George Quiett and went on to sign a pro contract with the Houston Oilers.

His first coaching job came in 1975 as an assistant defensive coach at North Forsyth. He credits Hayes with helping him obtain that position. When Hayes was named head coach at WSSU in '76 Bailey was one of his first appointments as an assistant. In his five years at Winston-Salem Sate Bailey helped mastermind a defense that led the Rams to two consecutive unbeaten seasons and two CIAA titles.

Bailey also served as recruiting co-ordinator for the football program and influenced a number of blue chip prospects to sign with the Rams. He also was the teams conditioning coach, was in charge of pro relations for the player, and served as an academic counselor.

At FSU Bailey will replace Tom Morris who left the school to take over the head coaching job at Morgan State. Morris had coached at Virginia State until last year when he led Fayetteville to a 4-5-1 mark.

Bailey when contacted would neither confirm nor deny that he had been offered the job. "I have been contacted by Fayetteville about the position but they have not offered me the job and I haven't signed anything. Becoming a head coach has always been one of my goals however and I would have to take a serious look at the job if it were offered," he said.

Officials at Fayetteville said they had made no decision on the job but did say that Bailey was the top candidate for the position.
