the bids have been chosen and the contractor has been chosen.

Virginia Newell, alderman for the East Ward, in which the Goler Apartments are located said,

The problems there have been going on for two to three years." "Something's had to be done, everyone knew that, or else those apartments would have had to been closed down, it was just that bad our there." Newell said that the residents had become very vocal in letting their complaints about the housing conditions be known and that publicity was a key factor in the receipt of the federal grant.

The grant was applied for by Urban Housing, Inc., a management firm hired by Goler Metropolitan A.M.E. Zion Church, the owner of the apartments. Rev. Horace Walsler, pastor of Goler Metropolitan said that the church hired Urban Housing to manage the complex five years ago and it was the firm who came up with the idea to apply for the grant.

"We've had so many needs and so many things that need taking care of out there, that we couldn't do it all without the grant," said Rev. Walsler.

Davita Martin, vice-president of Urban Housing, Inc. said that the money will be used for interior and exterior renovations.

"The first thing we are going to do is repair and replace the roofing on the apartments, broken and cracked windows and guard rails will also be replaced," said Martin. Martin said that the floors in some units would be replaced and would be re-painted and out.

idents of jurisdictions changing their election laws to benefit minorities voters? Where are the state legislatures which have enacted statutes mandating enforcement by local cities, counties, and school boards of the 14th and 15th amendment voting rights? Where are the state attorneys general, who provide positive guidance to local governmental attorneys? Where are the minority citizens who testify to the good deeds of their elected officials? If they exist at all, they have not come before this subcommittee."

The original Voting Rights Act, which has been extended twice, is designated to ensure that racial and language minority citizens, have the same opportunity as other Americans to participate in the nation's political life. When the law was passed and again when it was reauthorized in 1970 and 1975, Congress provided special enforcement measures to guarantee compliance by state and local governments with a history of officially sanctioned discrimination. The law now contains three "triggers" to identify such past systemwide bias.

The original "trigger" (1) brought under special coverage the entire states of Alabama, Alaska, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Virginia. In addition, 40 counties in North Carolina and scattered counties in Arizona, Hawaii and Idaho were also covered.

This aspect of the law brought heated rebuttal from many southern representative as to the constitutionality of the law, claiming that it was "regional-legislation."

"Triggers" (2 and 3) establish jurisdiction where 5 percent of the voting population are members of a single language minority (not english) and the illiteracy rate for that population is higher than the national rate of illiteracy.

Section 5 of the Act requires jurisdictions covered under the first two "triggers" to submit in advance any proposed change in election laws or procedures, to the federal government for approval.

The current debate over extension of the Act centers on the continuance of Section 5, the heart of the Voting Rights Act. Two legislative approaches have been proposed. Bill S. 895 and H.R. 3112 filed by Sen. Charles C. Mathias (R-Md.) and Rep. Peter Rodino (D-N.J.) call for continued current provisions of the act for ten years and would clarify the provisions involved in last year's Supreme Court decision in Mobile vs. Bolden.

In that case, the court held that it was necessary to substantiate a specific intent to discriminate in order to demonstrate voting discrimination; these bills would provide that voting discrimination could be proven by showing a discriminatory result.

Meanwhile, Rep. Henry Hyde (R-Ill.) has introduced bill H.R. 3473 that would abolish Section 5 of the Act, although individual judges would retain the power to impose pre-clearance in selected cases. The bill would correct the Mobile vs. Bolden decision by also requiring proof of discriminatory result instead of discriminatory intent.

The debate over the future of the act that has already begun in the house of Representatives, will be carried out across the country during the next year. The house hearings, before the Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, that is chaired into by Rep. Donald Edwards (D-Calif.), will continue into June. The full house is expected to act on the legislation later this year.

Emphasizing the need to get rid of jealousy and envy and to "work together," Sullivan came down hard on "dependency."

"We must work together politically and economically to help ourselves and depend on no one. We must not be dependent on any one political party or any one political ideology, we must not even depend on White liberals or White conservatives. We must depend on ourselves to help ourselves -- Whites can support us, but they cannot lead us!" he shouted.

Citing the need for Black economic and political pressure, using the Black press, the Black church, Black fraternal and civic organizations and the more than 2,000 branches of the NAACP, the pioneer leader of boycotts and father of Operation Breadbasket painted a picture of potential Black progress across America and around the world.
