Williams Speaks At NCCU Ceremony

North Carolina Central University honored its founder and first president, Dr. James E. Shepard, at its annual Founder's Day convocation last Friday.

The observance featured an address by Franklin H. Williams, president and trustee of the Phelps-Stokes Fund of New York City.

The Founder's Day honors the man who founded the university in 1910 and saw it become in 1925, the nation's first state-supported liberal arts college for black people. By the time of Dr. Shepard's death in 1947, the university, then the North Carolina College at Durham, offered undergraduate and undergraduate programs in the arts and sciences, and in business. Its professional programs included a School of Law and a School of Library Science.

The university's graduate programs in education were training, in 1947 and for many years, thereafter, a substantial majority of the black school principals and administrators employed in North Carolina.

Dr. Shepard was a powerful president of the institution and a political force in the state of North Carolina until the day of his death. His writings and speeches affected election results, influenced legislative action, and won acclaim for his institution.

Williams has been president of the New York-based Phelps-Stokes Fund since 1970. The fund, established in 1911 by the will of Mrs. Caroline Phelps Stokes, has conducted programs in higher education for black Americans, Native Americans, and poor whites, as well as in housing for the poor of New York.

NCSA Concert Slated

The School of Dance at the North Carolina School of the Arts will present "O'Keeffe," a modern dance performance of original choreographed works, Wednesday, Nov. 18, through Saturday, Nov. 21. "O'Keeffe" will be performed in the Agnes de Mille Theatre at 8:15 pm nightly with an additional performance at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 21.

"O'Keeffe" has been choreographed by three NCSA faculty members: Dianne Markham, Richard Gain and Richard Kuch. The combined work of the three choreographers describes Georgia O'Keeffe's youthful inspiration, the fullness of her developed life as an artist and the recollections of her later years. Music for "O'Keeffe" is by Tartini, Constant, Takemitsu and Barber.

Georgia O'Keeffe will be danced by Dianne Markham and college juniors Sandy Stone of Connecticut, Elizabeth Benjamin of Florida, and Sara Hook of Pennsylvania.

The program includes five original works choreographed by college juniors from the School of Dance. Robert Todd of Wilmington has choreographed "Stomp" for nine dancers to the music of the Pointer Sisters' "The Little Pony". Sara Hook has choreographed "Temperature Switch" about the changing relationships among three people to Ravel's "Violin Sonata in G Major".

Mark Dendy of Winston-Salem has choreographed an untitled work about the thin line between vanity and true beauty with music by Brian Eno. Elizabeth Benjamin has choreographed a work for two dancers entitled "Moment" which deals with abusive behavior between people.

Also on the program is "Amnesia", choreographed by Dianne Markham for one dancer. Roger Hannay's music for piano and synthesizer will provide the sound. Hannay, faculty member at UNC-Chapel Hill, has performed and conducted symposiums at NCSA.
