Chronicle Publisher Among Those To Receive Awards At Conference

A&T State University graduate Priscilla B. Smith is on the fast track as far as her broadcasting career is concerned.

Just three years out of college, Miss Smith has landed a position as anchor for WTVH-TV, a CBS affiliate in Syracuse, N.Y., a rather sizeable market.

And she has her mind set on even greater achievements.

Miss Smith is one of four persons who will be cited during the sixth annual A&T Mass Communications Career Conference at the university on Friday and Saturday, March 25-26.

The other award winners are Irwin Smallwood, deputy executive editor for the Greensboro News-Record; Ernest Pitt, publisher of the Winston-Salem Chronicle; and Harry Amana of the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

In addition, a number of outstanding student journalists at A&T will be honored. Miss Smith is a native of Greensboro and majored in professional English and mass communications at A&T. She has also worked for WECT-TV in Wilmington, as an anchor, WEAL Radio, WRQK Radio and WPET Radio, all in Greensboro, and WSML Radio in Graham.

Smallwood has been employed by the Greensboro paper for 36 years, as assistant sports editor, city editor, managing editor and deputy executive editor. His efforts to integrate the papers' professional staffs have attracted national mention.

Pitt, a journalism graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will be cited at the conference for his notable success as the publisher of a black-owned and black-oriented weekly paper, the Winston-Salem Chronicle.

Founded in 1974, the paper earlier this year won first place in the general excellence category among the state's weeklies. It became the first black-owned and operated newspaper in history to claim the award given by the North Carolina Press Association.

Amana, the only black faculty member of the journalism faculty at UNC, will be cited for his counseling of minorities into the field of journalism.

Amana holds two degrees from Temple University and has worked as a reporter for the Philadelphia Tribune and as a copy editor for the Detroit Free Press and the Philadelphia Inquirer. He has been a journalism lecturer at UNC since 1979.

Keynote speakers for the conference will be Gil Noble, nationally prominent television producer for WABC-TV in New York

A Lot For A Little.

Some people seem to be under the impression that it takes a lot of money to start an IRA.

It doesn't. At NCNB you can open your IRA with a small deposit. Then you can make additional deposits any time you want. Better yet, you can set up automatic withdrawals every month from your NCNB Checking or Savings Account, or your paycheck. Whichever suits you best. As you can see by the chart, even $25 a month can get big results over the years.

What's more, all the money you put in can be deducted from your income on your tax return. And the interest it earns is tax deferred. You only pay taxes when you make withdrawals, probably after you're retired and in a lower tax bracket.

For more information, come see us soon. We want everyone all over the neighborhood NCNB to get the best possible retirement.

*Assumes 9% annual interest, compounded daily on a 365/360 basis. Working individuals can contribute as much as 100% of their salary or wages, up to a maximum of $2,000 ($4,000 total for working couples). Substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.
