

Waterlilies Require Full Sun And Rich Soil

June is planting time for waterlilies in North Carolina. Whether you plant the hardy varieties or the tropical types, both need full sun, still water and rich soil.

Here are some other timely gardening tips from agricultural extension specialists at North Carolina State University:

If your azaleas bloomed well this spring but now have begun to appear a little sickly, even if you have fertilized them properly, the problem may be one of iron deficiency. You can buy small packages of iron chelate powder or small containers of liquid iron for mixing with the water. Apply this to leaves and around the plants.

Camelias, too, often are bothered by iron deficiency, so you may want to check them at the same time you are taking a look at the azaleas.

Did you ever wonder why some people, particularly professional landscapers, wrap trunks of newly planted trees? Here's why: Wrapping the trunk will retard evaporation of moisture from the bark. It protects the bark from the sun and will prevent sun scald.

Wrapping also prevents wood borers from attacking the tree. Burlap is a good material to use for wrapping the trunk of a tree. Special paper is also used and generally can be obtained at nurseries and lawn-garden centers.

Your poinsettia may need some attention about now. You might consider plunging or placing the pot in a sunny spot in your flower border or near the edge of the patio. When new growth appears, pinch back long stems to develop a low, bushy plant.

showing no class, in trying to keep people against their will," says Alioto. He is representing the Raiders in the civil trial in Salinas, Calif., concerning whether Oakland can regain the Raiders through eminent domain, a procedure typically used to condemn and buy property for public uses such as parks and highways. Last year, the California Supreme Court ruled that, in order to acquire the Raiders through eminent domain, Oakland would have to prove in a trial that it would be a valid public use to do so. ...

Business

Lisa takes advantage of a wide range of contacts she has established. She also uses fashion and floral magazines to assist clients in selecting the proper attire and floral arrangements.

Lisa has already planned eight weddings for this year, five of which will be in Lisa's home town of Pittsburgh, Pa. Lisa says her business has grown more rapidly than she had anticipated.

"Basically, I have not done any formal advertising," she says. "It has just been word-of-mouth and it has worked out well."

Pamela Stokes, who is scheduled to be married in November, is one client who heard of Best's Wedding Services and took advantage of it.

"My sister told me about it," says Miss Stokes. "I wanted to get married, but I didn't know how to plan for it or where to start. She (Lisa) sat down with me and advised me on how it should be set up, arranged and organized. My wedding is already planned."

Because the business is growing so rapidly, Lisa says she soon plans to move into a shop. Ultimately, she says, she'd still like get to put her business degree to work in the corporate sector. But for now, she's intent on building her own business.

"A wedding is an important event in a person's life," says Lisa. "You want it to be a special and memorable occasion. If you plan it properly, it can become just that."

Remember, Father's Day is June 19th!

This year, give DAD your thanks

Most Dads are pretty much taken for granted. Even though they're always there when we need them. And that's one reason we celebrate Father's Day...to give them a little extra attention without an ulterior motive. We've got hundreds of ways to say, "Thanks, Dad", with a great collection of gifts. Here's a few suggestions:

Hathaway Dress Shirts from $26 and up

Knit Shirts in Stripes and Solids from $18

IZOD Knit Shirts from $25

Short Sleeve Sport Shirts from $25

Dad always needs sports clothes, and Norman Stockton always has the best selection and finest quality. Choose khaki or plaid sport pants and then coordinate them from our outstanding collection of sport shirts, belts and socks.
