Rows of floral displays, dried flower arrangements, plants and freshly-picked vegetables lined an upstairs room in the Benton Convention Center Saturday afternoon.

The 4th District Garden Club Council presented its annual Flower Show, which showcases the talents of members of its 12 component garden clubs in Winston-Salem.

With the theme, "Nature On Parade," the show included displays in three categories: artistic design, table arrangements and horticulture.

"All the clubs cooperate in getting and re-assigning different tasks to carry out the fashion show," says Mrs. Edythe Williams, a member of the Flower Niche Garden Club and upcoming president of the council. Standing by her blue ribbon-winning table arrangement, "Dinner At Eight," Mrs. Williams continues, "We do this for the public to view so that they may enjoy the beauty."

Mrs. Ellsworth Banner, Flower Show chairperson, has worked with the show since it was first started.

"We had the first show at the Patterson Avenue Y about 10 years ago," says Mrs. Ellsworth, who won a blue ribbon for horticulture excellence for her Allium (a strong-smelling bulb plant). "Now, we have 12."

Artistic design blue ribbon recipients were: Mrs. Louise Smith, first place and overall tricolor award; Mrs. E. H. Banner, first place and creativity award; Mrs. Thelma Small, first place; Mrs. Verna Grier, first place and award of distinction, and Mrs. Katie Hatcher, first place.

The Best Yet Garden Club members won a blue ribbon for their table setting, "Father's Day Luncheon," and William McKoy Sr., a member of the council's new male club Prince's Feather, won an award for his hanging plant, Wandering Jew.
