Play Presented

Bennett College, in conjunction with Dr. Oakley N. Holmes, will present "Live Madonna" Dec. 1. at 7 p.m.

The theme for the production, "Images of Great Black World Madonnas," is developed from a contemporary painting by Holmes, who is from Jacksonville, Ala. After extensive research on the history of Black Marys, Holmes completed a 6-by-4 oil painting, which recreates original sculptures and paintings by early European artist. He suggests that while accurate copies of Black Madonnas still exist and show Caucasian features, the Africoid originals were destroyed during the time of the French Revolution and the Napoleonic Wars.

Oakley, who lectured at Bennett College in 1981, says he feels the Black Madonnas have been forgotten in religious history and worship.

Bennett's Art Department is currently reproducing the background for Holmes's Black Madonnas while the clothing classes are instructing the costumes for the live models.

Eight of Holmes's Madonnas will be presented in the Annie Merner Pfeifer Memorial Chapel.

Colleges Need To Fight Drug Abuse From Page B2

not begin when the player reaches the pros and suddenly realizes a financial fortune. Instead, it begins in the late high school years and flourishes in college with the use of such "social" drugs as alcohol and marijuana.

Of course, the consumption of alcohol is legal in this country and marijuana has all but been accepted in our society.

Still, today's young athletes must be warned that even the abusive use of marijuana and alcohol can lead to heavier drug use once one's financial picture improves. And there is nothing like a million-dollar pro sports contract to sweeten a financial outlook.

This is why it is so important that we reach our black athletes early, before they leave college. Not only must we pat them on the back and say, "nice basket, Sam," but we must constantly lecture them about the woes that lie ahead.

If the big, white colleges that exploit black talent won't do this, then the black schools will have to work doubly hard, not only to reach their own athletes, but to reach into the communities for others.

The very lives of many of our black athletes could depend on it.
