Dr. M. P. Nicholson, D.D.S., and Dental Assistant Donna Hunt (above), work with a patient on a bonding appointment.

Dental Assistant Sharon Mabe (left), prepares trays for the impressions needed to make dentures. Of course, all measurements and impressions are taken by Dr. Nicholson himself.

Do Your Dentures Fit Properly?

If you already wear dentures, what can you do to get the most comfortable fit? If you are going to have dentures made, what do you need to know about them?

Your teeth are one of the most important parts of your body. And, well-made dentures can make a big difference in enjoying a meal, as well as enjoying your own smile.

Dr. Marion Nicholson, D.D.S. has 32 years of experience working in the field of dentistry. "The word 'fit' means something different to me than other people," he said. "A patient will tell me, 'Oh yes, my dentures stay up fine.' But then a closer examination shows red blotches in the mouth. An accurate fit would not cause that to happen."

A yearly checkup is recommended for denture wearers for religns and remakes that might be necessary. "Periodic checkups and adjustments are very important in keeping the bone structure in good shape," Dr. Nicholson pointed out. "Ill-fitting dentures cause massive destruction of bone.

And when that's gone, you can't replace it. The bone in your mouth is fragile and dentures that wobble around tear that bone. It's a shame to see someone 55 years old who can't sit back and enjoy a meal because their ridges are torn to pieces."

Dr. Nicholson uses the comparison of the preventive maintenance you give your automobile. Getting your wheels aligned and balanced regularly prevents further wear and tear on your car. Your dentures also need to be aligned and balanced periodically. "Your bone, as part of the body, is changing all the time," said Dr. Nicholson. "The living body is all about the building up and breaking down of cells. The money spent on fillers and liners in the drug store would buy new dentures every year or two."
