

With six players on squad

Mustangs dominate defensive team

Jacques Holiday, an intimidating defensive end for Parkland and the Chronicle's Player of the Year in local high school football, tops the list of defensive performers on the Chronicle All-City/County Team.

Holiday is one of six Mustang players named to the team. He is joined by Bobby Scriven, one of the best all-around athletes in the county, Tray Thacker, a 6-2, 260-pound defensive tackle, Derrick McCorkle, an outside linebacker, David Fenner, another Mustang outside linebacker, and Anthony Wardlow, Parkland's top defensive back this season.

The talent-laden Mustangs, with six picks on defense to go along with four on offense, placed a total of 10 players on the team.

Carver, which played most of the season in relative obscurity, placed three players from its defense on the team. The "triplets" -- juniors Ray Agnew, Derrick Debnam and Fernando Horn -- all three of whom figure to be highly recruited next season, played fundamentally sound, albeit unenthusiastic football this season.

North Forsyth had only one player named to the defensive team. Senior Calvin Wright, the pint-sized defensive back, was a force for the Viking defensive secondary. In addition to holding down a cornerback slot, Wright saw action at tailback and also ran back punts and kickoffs.

Newcomer of the Year was Mt. Tabor's Tyrone Lewis, who pulled double-duty as the Spartans' quarterback and a defensive back. Lewis was selected to the team as a defensive back and is the only sophomore on either offense or defense.

Scott Faircloth, who played wide receiver and defensive back and handled the punting chores for Reynolds, was the only Demon to make the squad. Faircloth's punting kept Reynolds opponents backed up in their own territory and his team in several games.
