than what they expect or deserve, but they should first of all be complete within themselves, with all voids in life filled. As a result, that significant other we're searching for does not have tacit control over our inner well-being, and he doesn't have to be "a professional" or drive a BMW or maintain any other attribute that extends beyond the basic character of a person.

by Henry Leo Schobel. Other exhibiting artists are Patrick Craig, Steven Cushner, Greg Hannan, Patrick I. Kehoe, Walter Kravitz, David Kruger and Robin Rose.

Also included is William Willis, whose severe geometric shapes rendered in oils recently won him a national Award in the Visual Arts fellowship.

"This exhibition features diverse approaches to painting by some of the most inventive and quality artists in the D.C. area," says Richard Craven, SECCA associate curator. "There is no attempt to distinguish some sort of school or style relative to Washington, but rather an opportunity to witness some of the directions being pursued by young artists from this major urban center."

Two other exhibitions, one of photographs and the other of mixed media sculptures, will open at SECCA Dec. 13 and continue through Jan. 26.
