Throwing rocks, bottles has become the 'thing to do'

Compiled by YVONNE H.B. TRUHON
Chronicle Staff Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) -- Rock and bottle throwing has become "the thing to do" for young people in the racially troubled College Hill area, police say.

"It's really at the point that it's becoming fadish," said Lt. Sam Jones of the Tampa Police Department. "Any car driving through there could get hit."

Since disturbances flared in the primarily black housing development following the Feb. 18 death of Melvin Hair, young people have been pelting passing cars with rocks, bottles and stones, mainly on weekends.

Hair, a 23-year-old black man described as retarded, died after a white police officer used a since-banned choke hold to take him into custody.

Hair was one of four blacks who died after confrontations with white police officers in less than five months.

Public Safety Administrator Robert Smith said rock and bottle throwing is not new, that it has been going on for eight years.

"There have been incidents before, but since February it appears to be the thing to do," Jones added.

Archbishop Tutu will visit Iowa to receive peace award

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) -- Bishop Desmond Tutu of South Africa, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize, will be in Davenport on May 26 to receive the 1987 Pacem in Terris Peace and Freedom Award.

The award, presented by the Catholic Diocese of Davenport, will honor Tutu's work for peace, freedom and human dignity, diocese officials said.

Tutu, 55, a black Anglican churchman, has become renowned worldwide for speaking out on behalf of South African blacks denied the vote and other rights under that nation's apartheid system. Dan Ebener, director of the social action department of the Davenport diocese, said Tutu will give the commencement address at Oberlin College in Oberlin, Ohio, on May 25 and travel to Davenport the next day.

Although all the details of Tutu's visit have not yet been worked out, Ebener said the bishop is expected to deliver a major address at the awards ceremony, to be held at St. Ambrose College.

"We are very excited that he will be coming," Ebener said.

Previous recipients of the Pacem in Terris award have included Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Mother Teresa and Bishop Maurice Dingman.

Black leaders will ask that bypass be named for King

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) -- Black leaders say they will ask the 1988 Legislature to name a federal highway bypass after the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Emanuel Smith, president of the Lee County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said efforts to name the U.S. 45 bypass between Saltillo and Shannon after King began this year, but came too late for the bill to pass both houses.

Tupelo aldermen endorsed the move, but delays resulted when they sought approval from Verona, Saltillo and Shannon city officials and Lee County supervisors. The bill passed the state Senate, but the session adjourned before it could come up in the House.

Boyce Grayson, the city's lone black alderman, promised, however, that "we'll bring it up again next year."

OFFBEAT

Woman has a baby in SF airport

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -- All kinds of aircraft have landed at San Francisco International Airport over its 60-year history. But a stork? Never.

That omission was taken care of last Friday at 1:29 a.m. with the birth of a healthy 6-pound girl to Gurpreet Mayall of Yuba City, Calif., in the lobby of the airport's medical clinic.

Nurse Peggy Mullin said when she opened the clinic door, appropriately in the arrivals area of the airport, that mother and child "arrived about the same time."

"This is the first time a baby was delivered on the premises," said airport spokesman Ron Wilson, who estimated that more than 500 million passengers have passed through the gates since 1927.

Mrs. Mayall, who has an 11-month-old daughter, said the baby's estimated time of arrival was not until April 19.

"Maybe I will name it 'Airport '87,'" she joked on the phone from her room at nearby Peninsula Hospital. She said that she and her husband, Inderpal, a Yuba City accountant, were waiting at the airport for the arrival of her mother when the baby signaled an early landing.

Retriever fetches beer for owner

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) -- David Munson does the drinking, while Lady, his 8-year-old golden retriever, fetches the beers from the refrigerator and throws the empties in the trash.

"I just lie on the couch and relax, and she does all the work," said Munson, 38.

He said he got the idea for the trick after friends told him about a beer commercial in which a golden retriever is sent to the kitchen to bring back beers for a group of card players.

Lady already knew how to open the back door by tugging a towel, so Munson tied another towel to the refrigerator door.

Then he put her tennis ball inside and told her to fetch it. She not only opened the door on her own, but closed it without prompting, he said.

Next, he played "fetch" outside, using a beer can.

It took three hours to put it all together, he said, adding: "She's extremely smart."

Tutu defies a new police decree

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

CAPE TOWN, South Africa -- Black Archbishop Desmond Tutu early this week defied a new police decree by urging more than 700 people at an Anglican church service to join in calling for the release of people detained without charge.

The overflow crowd at St. George's Cathedral included U.S. Ambassador Edward Perkins, the first black U.S. ambassador to South Africa, who issued a statement condemning the new state-of-emergency regulations as he arrived at the church.

Tutu, winner of the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize and the highest-ranking Anglican clergyman in southern Africa, told the congregation, "I will continue to urge, as I do now, the authorities to release all detainees or bring them to court. And I hope you support me in such a call. Do you?"

Hundreds in the audience shouted back, "Yes!" and the congregation broke into applause for 20 seconds.

Regulations imposed during the weekend by Police Commissioner Johan Coetzee prohibit calls for the release of detainees or other efforts to rally public support for them. The rules have been assailed by a broad spectrum of clergy, opposition politicians, civil rights lawyers and newspapers.

Monitoring groups estimate that 25,000 people have been detained without charge at some point since the state of emergency was declared 10 months ago. About 5,000, including hundreds of children, are believed to be in detention now. The government refuses to give overall figures.

Tutu and other church leaders say the new regulations appear to outlaw public prayers for detainees. Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok has denied this, but reportedly planned to meet with other security officials in Pretoria to discuss whether clarification was needed.

Perkins joined in singing "Nkosi Sikelel' iAfrika" (God Bless Africa) as the service ended.

He said he attended because "it is in line with what we have always done -- to try to underscore the undesirable nature of detentions."

Joining Tutu in leading the service were Rabbi Selwyn Franklin, Roman Catholic Archbishop Stephen Naidoo and the Rev. Allan Boesak, leader of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and an outspoken anti-apartheid activist.

Boesak explicitly called for violating the new regulations, which ban displaying posters or stickers supporting the release of detainees.

"I would so much like to see stickers appearing on cars all over the country in the next few days," Boesak said. "I would like to see posters in every church by Easter Sunday."

He suggested that the stickers and posters bear the text of a passage from the New Testament book of Hebrews, which he read:

"Remember those who are in prison as if you are in prison. Remember those who are tortured as if you shared one body."

"I want to say this to the South African government," Boesak added. "Your days are up. You know this. This is just another senseless mockery of God's word."

Tutu described the new regulations as blasphemous.

"Christians cannot obey them without dishonoring God," he said.

The regulations make it illegal to attend a gathering in honor of detainees or to make any oral or written call for their release. Violation could bring a $10,000 fine or 10 years in prison.

The country's largest daily newspaper, The Star of Johannesburg, said in an editorial that Vlok's "disingenuous explanations ... help not a bit."

"If anything, they make the state look incompetent as well as increasingly fascist. South Africa's standards of justice and freedom have reverted to where they were in (Nazi) Germany 50 years ago," it said.
