ing and develop it in a vacuum," she said.

He said that initially city officials had planned a smaller building with a metal exterior for the new coliseum, we could justify recommending to the board that we put up a metal structure behind it," he said.

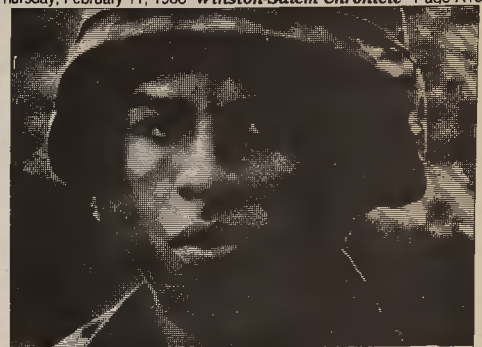

He said he presented two options to the aldermen; one for a building with an estimated cost of $6.8 million and another for a building with an estimated cost of $8.35 million. He said both the Public Works Committee and the Finance Committee approved the $8.35 million structure. But the Finance Committee asked Fredericks to look at ways to scale down the costs.

Fredericks said the city staff would consider cost-cutting options such as standard outdoor lighting, instead of the ornamental lighting being planned and regular bleachers, instead of the portable seats.

Burke expressed her concern for how such cost overruns would be viewed by voters. "I want the voters to understand that we (the aldermen) are not responsible for this," she said. "We can't control what the city does unless we become full-time aldermen. Maybe then we can make sure nothing like this happens in the future."

control of their children's education. It will be done, she said, with the consent of the white government officials who oversee curriculum at black schools.

"The books I had to read in high school were senseless stuff that you can't relate to at all," she added. "If parents can be made aware that they can buy other types of books, it will be great."

The word about Skotaville has spread through the country, and Ms. Sihole said manuscripts arrive at a rate of roughly one a day.

"I wish there was another publishing house like Skotaville, so we don't get all the junk," she said. "We just don't have the time and the staff to sit down with every writer and discuss how to improve their work."

Despite the overload, Ms. Sihole said, Skotaville wants to encourage unpublished authors and to put out more works by black women.

Skotaville is named itself after Mwel Skota, a pioneering black writer and editor who was secretary-general of the African National Congress when it was a legal organization in the 1940s.

Skotaville's primary purpose, according to Managing Director Mothobi Muloatse, "is promoting the liberation struggle." Despite its overt political stance, Skotaville has received no warnings from the white-led government, nor have its offices been searched by police.

IT'S A MATTER OF PRIDE.

It's in you, it's in your friends. You just have to look for it.

How? You work hard. Very hard. Toughen your mind, and your body. Strive for new goals. Reach those goals. Make yourself better all around.

It's not easy. Nothing worthwhile is. But the incredible feeling you get makes every ounce of pain, sweat, and sacrifice worth it.

Some people find their pride in the U.S. Army. They find it in themselves, their units, their country. You can, too.
