BRIEFLY NOTED

Telling The Story

Mal Goode, first black television correspondent for ABC network news, tells aspiring young journalists in Portland, Ore., that in order to succeed, "you must set your sights high and be the best at whatever you choose to do." Goode spoke to radio and television students at Jefferson High School in Portland during a recent appearance in the city to help unveil the "Gallery of Greats: Black Journalists ... Then and Now" art collection. He is one of 12 journalists featured in the collection, which was commissioned by the Miller Brewing Co.

Childes promoted to manager at Plej's

Sandra Childes has recently been promoted to manager of the Plej's Textile Mill Outlet in Northside Shopping Center. She is a native of Winston-Salem and attended Winston-Salem State University and Rutledge College, where she studied business management.

Larry Buddie, operations manager out of Rock Hill, S.C., notes that the reason Childes was appointed manager was on account of her leadership ability and the way she organized the store at a very crucial time.

Childes has had formal business training, but she attributes most of her leadership ability to her grandfather, Benjamin Blackshear, who always taught her to be a leader, to be out in front. Being the oldest in a family of seven children helped in that area, too.

Sandra Childes recently became the manager of the Plej's Textile Mill Outlet in Northside Shopping Center.

Childes enjoys the new position and enjoys working with people. She is the mother of two children, Shermica and Sherraine. She is the daughter of Minnie Polite of Winston-Salem.
