Salvation Army group honors Girls Club

The Salvation Army Girls' Club celebrated Girls' Club Sunday March 13 at the Chapel of the Salvation Army Headquarters, 717 S. Marshall St. in Winston-Salem.

Maj. Michael Waters opened the service with the Call to Worship.

Girls of the Month Awards and runner-up awards were presented. The Midget Girl of the Month is Nichole Broadnax, and the runners-up are Joya Thompson, T'Vonya Frazier and Aleash House. The Junior/Intermediate Girl of the Month is Lakisha Wright, and the runners-up are Donna Lineberger, April Hargrove, Shamecka Coleman and Ka'Yana Williams.

The club members presented a special program titled "The Story Tellin' Man" in songs, narration and slide presentation.

Slides had been taken of the girls in costume acting out the stories, and the slides were shown as the narrator told the story. This provided an effective dimension to the program. The service was carried out by the girl members and the Girls' Club staff under the direction of Mary Johnson, executive director of the club. Girl's Club Sunday occurs once a year in March, when the Salvation Army recognizes its ministry to girls.
